THERSDAY AFTERNOON.

The convention was called to order at 2 p.m. by President Dickson.

Rev. C. W. Watch, of Oshawa, opened the session with a Bible reading on "The Holy Spirit and Missions." There were 1,400,000,000 of our fellow beings, he said, without the knowledge of Jesus Christ. Without the knowledge of Jesus Christ. But it was a fact that God was arousing the youth of the church and bringing to its touch those heathen lands. If India or Jepan and Turkey were to be reached, if these who were followers of Mahomet were to be reached, if the 80,000,000 women of the harcms were to be reached, it was not the harcms were to be reached, it was not the harcms were to be reached, it was not the society and the property of the property of the property of the second was a property of the pr we harems were to be reached, it was not crely necessary to talk about it in consistency, held our missionary meetings galar, put down our 2 cents every week in it was necessary for us to be baptized the the Holy Ghost ower so that our prayers shall be answered that our prayers shall be answered that our prayers shall be answered.

If they let these opportunities pass our west would be like the Western States, filled with godless communities that were a disgree to their national civilization. The work of home missions was pressing grow the Dominion as at no other time. The whole world was becoming united by the bonds of electricity and steam and other hations of the earth like one family. In a few weeks the missionsy could be landed in the remotest part of the earth. Now that Christ had opened up the highways is appealed to them to go forth as one vast army and win these nations over to the cause of God and rightecusness. Who would undertake the work if they did not, who represented the youthful Christianity of this land? Some of these rich Christians should do as the crusaders of old most like and the country of the factors of that time had taken out armed warriors to fight for their cause. They could not all be leaders but should be content in the rank and file. Leaders were useless unless they shad brave sodiers behind them. enjoyed his presence here, but what a delight to receive the reward above from his hand, his pierced hand.

Mr. H. W. Frost gave his hearers some suggestions on 'How to Support a Missionary." He hoped the day would soon come when every Christian Endeavor Society would have a foreign missionary of its own. His first recommendation to a society would have a foreign missionary of its own. His first recommendation to a society would be to call all its committees together, hold a solemn meeting and formally signthedath warrant of suppers, socials and lairs. (Applause.) These things might have a place in Endeavor Society work, but not in connection with foreign missions. The China Inland Mission had 550 native workers on the field and never took up a collection nor made a solicitation for the work, and yet not one of those 550 had ever lacked a meal. This illustrated God's sustaining power. The speaker pointed out that a society of 50, by each member paying but 25 cents a week, could support a missionary. In small places the denominations should unite for this purpose. Mr. Frost laid down some excellent suggestions and concluded an excellent suggestions where we have their representatives in the foreign field.

Then came "the pastors' hour," conducted by Rev. Mr. Radeilife, of St. Catharines, during which the ministers of various denominations discussed the top'c, "What the Y. P. S. C. E. has done for my church," The chairman allowed each five minutes, and premptly rang the bell when the speaker of Rev. P. K.

A GRAND RECEPTION.

A reception and banquet on a grand scale was tendered the visiting delegates between 5 and 7 p.m. in the Princess Rink. The beene at the rink during that period of time has perhaps never been equaled, save yothe Blake banquet. The luge building, ablaze with light, was elaborately decorated, and the entire floor was covered with tastefully-spread tables, upon which was served a feast for the multitude. One thousand bright-faced, happy young people, seated in long rows, were busy devouring the good things that lay before them, making the place rescand with laughter and conversation between muntifuls. Scores of young London Endeaveres scurried hither and thither between the rows attending to the wants of their guests. A varitable reservoir was required to hold the hot tea and office asked for and a whole brigade was enlisted in the duty of serving it. The amount of victuals consumed can only be estimated by a calculation of the the quantity that served to appease the vigorous appetite of each delegate multi-A GRAND RECEPTION. banquet was the result

THURSDAY EVENING.

A chorus of "noce" greeted this and several tried to speak at once. The president passed on.

Q.—What would you do with a member doing the control of the co weekly Endeavor and prayer meetings? A.—

It would be a capital thing for many prayer meetings. (Laughter.) It would put some life into them.

A committee was appointed to consider the advisability of amending the constitution with reference to certain points. One was to determine the relations of or define the distinction between the C. E. Seciety and the so-called Epworth Leagues of Christian Endeavor.

Mr. Wm. McNeill, of Scotland, brother of the celebrated Scotch divine, Rev. John McNeill, was introduced and proved a witty and effective young orator. He conveyed the greetings from Boston of Mr. Bean to the Ontario convention. The latter had been taken with heart trouble, and he (the speaker) had been performing his duties.

Many of my friends have wished that I was attacked by the same complaint. (Laughter.) I believe that that is a spontaneous trouble, and not one that arises from a sense of daty. (Laughter.) But traveling around this way, stopping only a day at one place, I don't have a chance." (Laughter.) Taking on a more earnest mood the elequent young Scotchman emphasized with force the necessity of personal endeavor along the line of soul-winning. He would like to spiritualize that immortal ode of Tennyson's, "The Charge of the Light Brigade," and make it apply to the mighty brigade of young Christians going into the battle heavily clad with all the armor that was in the blessed book.

In introducing the bishop of Huron the president referred to the latter as a gentle-

In introducing the bishop of Huron the president referred to the latter as a gentleman beloved over Canada and respected everywhere in England and Scotland.

The bishop, who was received with loud applause, said he would touch upon a topic closest to the Christian—entire consecration to God. It was not more money or more Christians they wanted so much as more fire. It was said that Satan did not care how many Christians there were in a city so long as they were quiet and half hearted. He would briefly bring before them a few points. The first one was that it was the will of God that every one of them should be like Jeaus Christ. There were three ways in which they were like Christ Jesus. They were like him when the characteristics of Christ were around them. Christ Jesus. They were like him when the characteristics of Christ were around them. The first characteristic of a true Christian was that he looked as if he had died, had been buried and had risen again. There were so few of them in whom the old nature was dead, and whenever it cropped up they showed their unlikeness to Jesus Christ. Asceond characteristics of Christ was that when on earth he was ever going about dloing good. To Christian Endeavorers he would say: Let your hands and your feet and your heart be bound in the service of Christ. It in the heart be bound in the service of Christ. It in the heart be bound in the power of the there are a mighty inflatus of their hearts or inrush of some overwhelming feeling, it knowing how God worked. If they I lowed Christ their motto would no longer that which was dubious, but that which was secure. It was not in study and retrement that the soul found its deepest job but it was when out with Christ in the st ma, and in hazarding life for that blessed L. I who bade us follow him.

Yhen the bishop concluded, applause for court. "Don't do that," he said, raising his hand, "I don't like it in the house of old."

"I never saw anything like it," was a common remark at the great reception in the rink.

No one can complain of London's hospitality. Billets have been found for every one of the 800 odd delegates, and 70 or 80 more can be accomodated.

Some amusing announcements are handed into the president, es that is the only way in which delegates can be readily communicated with. The following last evening caused a roar of laughter: "Will the young gentleman who was inquiring for Miss—(giving the name) kindly meet her beneath the Toronto banner at the close of this service."

What with issuing railroad tickets, selling postage stamps and newspapers, billeting delegates, receiving registrations, handing out programmes, answering the telephone, attending to the postofice box and answering a thousand and one questions, the staff of the bureau of information is a busy one indeed.

Delegates appreciate the cushions in the pews of the church.

That over 800 young people should rise before 6 o'clock to attend the surrise prayer meeting is a proof of their sincerity. The present convention is the largest gatheripg of young Christians ever hold in Canada.

London, Oct. 21.—The Archduke Charles Louis, oldest surviving brother of the Louis, oldest surviving brether of the Austrian Emperor, was in a carriage with his wife, the Archduchess Maria Theresa, returning from Wiener-Neustadt. The night was dark and the coachman lost the way. The carriage toppled into a ditch and turned upside down. The Archduke was stunned in the wreck, and the Archduchesswas severely injured about the lower limbs. The coachman was badly wounded about the head. The Archduke, as soon as he came to his senses, assisted his wife out of the wreck, and they made their way, to a railway station, some distance off, to a railway station, some distance off, where they received medical attention. His awindling has been of such a and a son of worthy parents in the United States. His swindling has been of such a clumsy character, and his assumption of princely title so obviously begus and extravagant, that the authorities are inclined to accept the plea of his friends that he is insane. When arraigned on an indictment at the Old Bailey to-day the bogus prince pleaded guilty. He was represented by counsel engaged by his relatives, who surgested that the prisoner was a lunatic and should be treated as such. It was shown by the prosecution that the presented of prince had been previously convicted of fraudulent practices at Liverpool, Sentence was deferred in order to enable curther inquiry to be made as to his antecedents and mental condition.

Cream's Last Chance.

LONDON, Oct. 20. — The prosecution closed to-day in the case of Thomas Neil Gream, the alleged poisoner of Matilda Clover and other girls. Mr. Geoghan, Clover and other girls. Mr. Geoghan, in his opening argument for the defense, said that he would not call any witnesses. He commented on the small quantity of strychnine found in the body of Matida Clover and asserted that the death of the women was due to her excessive indulgence in drink.

Counsel also commented on the weakness of the identification of Neill Cream as the man who had been with the Clover woman just previous to her fatal seizure, and dilated upon the relationship that had existed between the Clover girl and the prisoner was a blackmailer.

ridiculed the suggestion that the identity of Cream was incomplete. The two women, Elizabeth Masters and Elizabeth May, had thoroughly established the prisoner's identity. They had seen him enter the house where the Clover woman lived. They knew his appearance perfectly, for they had been several times in his company and were actually waiting for him at the time they saw him go into No. 27 Lambeth road. As to the cause, there could be no possible doubt that it was strychnine. The excessive vomiting of the Clover woman after she had taken the poison explained the smallness of the amount of poison found in the body. After Sir Charles Russell had concluded the court adjourned.
