Crown Attorney. When a World reporter called on Mr Fenton and asked him for his opinion as to whether singing on the streets was an offence punishable under any law, that gentleman produced the vagrant act and pointed out a passage enacting that 'all per sons causing a disturbance in the streets by screaming, swearing, singing or being drunk" shall be deemed vagrants and liable to the penalties of the act.
"I do not think, said Mr. Fenton," that under this act singing on the streets would of itself constitute an offence. Lit must be of such a character as to cause a disturbance This construction is also favored by the fact that the word "singing" is associated with "screaming, swearing or being drunk."

Then said the reporter: The offence would depend not upon the character of the singing, but the temper of the listeners. To this Mr. Fenton replied that it was To this Mr. Fenton replied that it was a question of what was reasonable. If students walked along the streets singing songs of an inoffensive kind, and not inharmoniously, he did not think they were amenable to the law, even if a certain class of the community took offence at them and raised a disturbance. To take another case, no one would think of arresting the salvation army as vagrants because they marched along the street singing hymms. On the other hand, if students or any one else howled and shricked on the streets, or sung the other hand, if students or any one else howled and shrieked on the streets, or sung offensive songs, they would undoubtedly come under the law. And a band of music might be just as objectionable if offensive party tunes were played which were liable to create a disturbance.

There is also a city bylaw governing the case, but it is not so explicit as the vagrant act.

ILLEGAL LIQUOR.

The Police Make a Tour of St. John's Ward and Seize a Quantity of the Stuff. The police of No. 2 division made a tour of St. John's ward Saturday afternoon and yesterday in search of illegal liquor, the result being that the Agnes street station is now stocked with "budge" enough to start a tavern. Four officers went to Mrs. Michie's at Albert and Chestnut streets, in the afternoon. No liquor was found in the house, but on going into a shed in the rear, the searchers discovered 58 bottles of beer, 11 gallons of whiskey, brandy and other spirits in large jars, and 3 bottles of wine. The stuff was taken to the station.

A visit to the premises of Herbert Mat-A visit to the premises of Herbert Matthews, at the north-east corner of Elizabeth and Albert streets, resulted in the finding of a five gallon keg of beer in a cistern in the yard. The keg was on top and some beer had been drawn from it. It was confiscated. Matthews deales occupancy, saying the house is leased by Frank Easthope, who is at present in jail. Easthope seems to come in handy as a leaseholder on occasions of this kind.

A squad of men also paid their respects to Robert Ellison of 5 Centre street. As they entered the door a girl emptied a jug they entered the door a girl emptied a jug of whisky into the sink. Mrs. Ellison denied having any liquor on the premises. But the officers wanted more than her word for it and searched the place. David Wray Arrested on a Charge of Bigamy-The Story of the Affair.

Bigamy seems to be a fashionable crime just now. Toronto can boast of its bigamy case as well as other places in the country. The accused in this instance is David Wra In October, 1878, he was married in this city to Miss Margaret Henris, whose folks live in Scarborough. Some time afterwards, Wray's father died at Montreal, leaving him considerable property. A share of the property on the ground that she was Wray's wife. Wray repudiated her, but the result is not known. Latterly Wray has not been good to his second, wife, who has had to work out for her support and clothes. The affair of the first marrage was revived and wife No. 2 laid information against her husband, charging him with bigamy. The case will be heard in the police court to-

FROM SIN TO SALVATION.

The Canadian evangelation society has brought an English evangelist named Oscar Owers to the city to labor for the salvation of souls. Mr. Owers commenced his good work at Shaftesbury hall last night. The meeting was largely attended, and S. H. Blake, Q.C., presided. Mr. Owers is a clear and forcible speaker, with a good style of delivery, and created fquite an impression on his hearers as he pointed out the way from sin to salvation. The Trinity College choral club, under the management of Mr. John Carter, r., gave a pleasing entertainment at Oshawa on Friday night in aid of St. George's church. There was a large attendance. The chorases part songs and solos were all well rendered. The Bunthorne and Grosvenor duet by Messrs. Scadding and Bunt, and a cornet more than ordinarily good, and were well received. The choral club will sing at the conversazione at Osgocde hall on Tuesday.

LOTS OF SNOW.

A glance at our telegraphic columns will show that the snowstorm of Saturday and yesterday was pretty general. It tried hard to snow in this city on Saturday night, and what little did come down was speedily thawed by the genial ravs of the sun yesterday. By all appearances Toronto is to be forgotten by the dispenser of "the beautiful" the present winter, so-called.

A POLICE PLOT.

It is said that a member of Toronto policemen intend petitioning Sir John for a grant of land in the Northwest," for the purpose of establishing a colony. Their life has been rendered a burden to them by the students, and they want to go some-where where they can grow batons and rear young policemen in peace. The Khan promises to start a paper for them in the colony.

Yesterday's address at Temperance hall was delivered by Rev. J. P. Sheraton, who vlewed the subject of temperance from a bible standpoint, as one of the "fruits of the spirit" of which St. Paul speaks in his epistle to the Galatians. The word temperance, he explained, came from Greek woods meaning "in power," and its true meaning was power over self. The man who had this power would refrain from anything which was calculated to injure either himself or his neighbor; and in this view total abstinence might be a logical result of temperance. There is a little unpleasantness in the choir of the church of the Ascension, Richmond street. CHURCH STATISTICS.

The Globe's Thirst for Figures-Counting the

The old penchant of the Globe for counting the horse posts, the panes of glass, and the knots in the sidewalks, broke out anew yesterday. The reporters, the editors, the pressmen and Jim Banks, the engineer, along with the compositors, were detailed to count the attendants at the various city churches and the result of their abors ought to appear in due tabulated form in this morning's paper. No definite instructions were given and the artifices resorted to by the "representatives" to get "the facts" were amusing.

Moses Oates counted St. James cathedral in this way: He took a large number of the unsold copies of his almanac and put a box full of them at each exit under a card inscribed, "free; take one." He knew how many he put out and how many were left. In the evening he multiplied the height of the barometer by the square of the thermometer and divided the product by the number of exits. "There were thirty-four sneezes, but I think some darn critter put cayenne pepper on to the stove, 'cos there weren't more'n thirty-four there altogether."
