Farm Pupils.

In view of the hubbub now made over the matter of farm pupils in Canada it is exceedingly fortunate that Mr. Patteson's protest against the practices of the English firms engaged in sending young men to Canada was published so long ago as it was. It is over three years since the article, contributed by Mr. Patteson to The Canadian Live Stock Journal, was reprinted in the columns of The World, and copies of that issue were mailed to all the principal newspapers in Great Britain. Still the trade continued to flourish and its promoters to fatten. The truth is that, provided no premium can be most of the state of the payment by the construction of the bridge is not at all the principal newspapers in the bridge is not at all necessary and would recomend that the principal newspapers in the truth is that, provided no premium can be not entered by the construction of the bridge is not at all necessary and would recomend that the principal newspapers in the bridge is not at all necessary and would recomend the principal newspapers in the ruth is that, provided no premium can be not entered by the city of the large in the columns of the bridge is not at all necessary and would recomend the principal newspapers in the columns are principal to the continued to flourish and its promoters to fatten. He fortified this by quoting the Bishop of Peterboro, who in a controversy assumed to the principal newspapers in the principal newspapers in the principal newspapers in the tirest Britain. Still the trade continued to flourish and its promoters to fatten. The truth is that, provided no premiums charged, there is little harm done. The youth is either worth his board for his work or he is worth more or less. If less, no premium can make it a good job for the sort of youth to be at. If more, he soon discovers it and strikes for wages. There are worse things for any lad to find himself engaged at than farm, which is the provided and the subject of the employed in this trade than in any other. It depends on the employed. If he is so weat a vessel as to be turned into a slave by the farmer, the English farm pupil in Canada must be built differently from those of his race with whom city people are familiar. That sort of workman stands confessed now the things of more than his board, and most probably not worth that. A vast amount of sentil.

schools. Mr. Fraser said, however, that the abolition of separate schools as an institution regulated and permitted by statute would not close such schools. The only practical effect would be to compel those who are now effect would be to compell those who are now separate school supporters to pay two rates, for were they compelled to support the public schools they would just the same support the separate schools. He denied the inferiority for the separate schools in fitting people or all walks of life, and while he did not claim superiority for the pupils of such schools, he said their claim for existence did not rest upon that. It was with them a matter of conscience, and a belief that their school children should be day by day grounded in the truths of their religious belief. Mr. Stars quoted liberally from the statistics to show the spirit in which the Protestants of the province of Quebec are dealt with in school matters, claiming it to be more generous matters.

Fraser quoted liberally from the statistics to show the spirit in which the Protestants of the province of Quebec are dealt with in school matters, claiming it to be more generous than is the legislation regarding Roman Catholic separate schools in Ontario. Mr. Fraser rather carried the war into Africa by asking why there is not more religion taught in the public schools, seeing that it would only require unity among the Protestants, as the Catholic do not stand in the way. He next took up the allegation that there is a thing either in Ontario, Quebec, or the Dominion of Canada. He reviewed various historical Canadian events in support of this theory, and accused Mr. Meredith of riding the Protestant horse, the speaker introducing a few apt wittidisms that created a great deal of laughter on the Government side and not a few smiles among the Opposition. From this he proceeded to argue the general principle of the justice of separate schools without, however, bringing out any new points on this line, but amplifying and putting in mellifluous language the stock arguments. Incidentally, he hinted at the Justice of allowing the taxes of incorporated companies to go to the support of separate conducted by Rev. J. Grant of Toronto.

The Count Conrad Damonoff was able to sit up. He was in a great stuffed chair, playing with a favorite dog, while near by him sat Stephen Urzen. The young nobleman had gained rapidly since the visit of Ruric, for the antidotes he had taken had proved efficient, and he soon came back to the point he had reached before the administering of the poison.

"Stephen," he said, pushing his dog gently from him, "has anything been heard yet from Ruric Nevel ?" "Not that I know of," returned Urzen. "Oh, I wish I were able to assist in the search. But have you heard anything of "Only that the humpbacked priest is
