

Parting, and change, and death ! We read
No dark previsions on that sky ;
No shrouded griefs with silent tread
Upon the waters passed us by.

And yet not God Himself could call
That bright day from the vanished past,
Nor gather up the links, whose fall
Has made that evening hour the last.