The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on Principal McVicar, of Montreal, who was unavoidably absent, and on Rev. John Scott, of North Bruce, who was present, and acknowledged the honour done him.

Mr. D. M. Ramsay, B.A., passed

the first examination for the degree of Bachelor of Divinity.

The evening meeting in Knox Church proved to be a greater success than any ever held in connection with the closing of College. The large church was completely filled with a thoroughly interested audience, showing that the fitting opportunity alone was needed to call forth from the citizens of Toronto an expression of their good-will towards the College. Held at a time of the day when those who should be present have the necessary leisure, these gatherings will have the effect of bringing collegiate affairs more prominently to the public notice. Besides, the character of the addresses is such as to make them more appreciated than the learned lecture, not only by the people of the city, but by ministers and students as well. Toronto Presbyterians have certainly of late evidenced in many ways their desire for the prosperity of the College; we hope that in the future they will feel still more strongly that the success of the Colleges is in a measure identical with the very success of the Church.

When the meeting had been opened by devotional exercises, Principal Caven called upon Professor McLaren to address the graduating class:—

You are now called, gentlemen, to take a new and important step in life. You leave one sphere of usefulness to enter on another, to which you have long looked forward. From personal experience, I know how deep is the impression made by earnest devoted students on their fellows during the plastic years of college life. I am satisfied that a student who gives a worthy representation of a true Christian life in his college days, often exerts an influence for good of which he little dreams.

But whether you have used the noble opportunities of college life as fully you might or not, they are gone. You
