To COLOR IVORY.—Ivory billiard balls are colored by dyeing the surface of the ball and it lasts until that portion of the ivory wears off. The crimson color is produced by first boiling the ball in dilute nitric acid fourteen minutes and then for the same length of time in a solution of 1 to 200 of stannous chloride. The final boiling is in a solution of carmine in water dissolved by aid of ammonia. The balls are finally polished off with linseed oil which makes them bright.

Sealy iron salts dissolve more readily by adding the scales gradually to the menstrum than by triturating in a mortar.
