COTTON SOARS AGAIN. New York, June 8.—The price of cotton for delivery in July made another bold upward move on the opening of the New York cotton exchange today, and within half an hour advanced $1 50 a bale. This placed the price of the July option $3.75 a bale higher than the low price of yesterday morning. The trading which carried the July option to 12.25c a pound so early in the day was very active and exoited, and the price was contained. the day was very active and excited, and the price was sent soaring at the rate of 3 or 5 points for each sale recorded. Rumors that a group of English and American interests have cornered the July option caused most of the activity. Trading in the options of the later months was easy, at slight advances slight advances.
