What They Say About It.

Gunboat Smith:—"I won as I thought I would. But I found Pelkey a much tougher customer than I had expected. Nobody can afford to take any reckless chances with him; he sure has got one wallop.

wallop.

"I have not decided just what I am going to do next, but I probably will take a trip to France and go after Johnson. I feel sure I can beat him, and bring back the title to the white race, to whom it belongs."

Arthur Pelkey:—"I have no excuses to make. I went into the ring in prime shape and was beaten. But I still think I can beat Smith, and am going to ask him for a return battle as soon as I meet him."

Levinsky Gets Decision. Battling Levinsky was given the decision over Jim Coffey, of Dublin, in a sixround bout in Philadelphia Saturday The fight was fast throughout.

An Old Horseman Dead.

Colonel Davil Robertson Williamson, the Laird of Lawyers, Perthshire, and a brother-in-law of the late Lord Tredegar, of Balaclava fame, died recently at the age of 88. Colonel Williamson was a great horseman and once rode from Ayr to Lawers, a distance of 112 miles. When more than eighty years of age he rode eighty miles to attend a funeral.

seball World Now Agitated Over This Question and Effort Being Made to Frame Regulation That Will do Away With

The baseball world is agitated over the matter of a pitcher deliberately passing a good batter in order to have a better chance for his side with a less able hitter succeeding him. Managers and fans alike see that this practice spoils many an interesting moment in the Cambridge University team in 1892. From 1893 he became a regular player in the Yorkshire County eleven and was such a conspicuous success that he was chosen to play for England against the Australians. He abundantly justified his choice, following up an innings of ninety-one at Lord's (the famous London cricket ground) with a brilliant 108 in the second test match at the oval. From that time Mr. Jackson became one of the dominating personalities of representative cricket having the honor of captaining England against Australis in 1905. He scored twenty-one centuries for Yorkshire and his total runs for the county were 10,405 with an average of 33.78. Mr. Jackson retired from county cricket six years ago, owing to business reasons, and since then he has earned distinction as a golfer.

Why He's Going "We are thinking of going south for the winter."

"What's the trouble? Somebody ill?"

"No."

"No."

"Has your husband business interests down there?"

"Not at all. Heretofore he has held that wintering in the south was ridiculous and extravagant.

"Oh, I see. Now that he can afford the trip he wants to make it."

"It isn't exactly that, either. He's got the golf fever and he says that a man who has never played on these southern links during December or January doesn't amount to much."
