God gives to some ten talents, to others My text leads us into a scene of summer redolence. The world has had a great many beautiful gardens. Charlemagne added to the glory of his reign by decreeing that they be established all through the realms, deciding even the names of the flowers to be planted there. Henry IV. at Montpelier established gardens of bewitching beauty and luxuriance, gathering into them Alpine, Pyrenean and French plants. One of the sweetest spots on earth was the garden of Shenstone, the poet. His writings have made but little impression on the world, but his garden, the "Leasowes," will be immortal. To the natural advantages of that place was brought the perfection of art, Arbor and terrace and slope and rustic temple and reservoir and urn and fountain here and their crowning. Oak and yew and hazel put forth their richest foliage. There was no life more diligent, no soul more ingenious than that of Shenstone, and all that diligence and genius he brought to the adornment of that one treasured spot. He gave £300 for it. He sold it for several thousand. And yet I am to tell you today of a richer garden than any I have mentioned. It is the garden spoken of in my text-the garden of the church, which belongs to Christ, for my text says so. He bought it, he planted it, he owns it, and he shall have it. Walter Scott, in his outlay at Abbotsford, ruined his fortune, and now, in the crimson flowers of those gardens, you can almost think or imgine that you see the blood of that old man's broken heart. The payment of the last £100,000 sacrificed him. But I have to tell you that Christ's life and Christ's death were the outlay of this beautiful garden of the church, of which my text speaks. Oh, how many sighs and tears, and pangs and agonies! Tell me, ye women who saw him hang! Tell me, ye executioners who lifted him and let him down! 'Tell me, Christ, my Lord! thou sun that didst hide, ye rocks that "Christ loved the church and fell! gave himself for it." If the garden of the church belongs to Christ, certainly he has a right to walk in it.' Come then, O blessed Jesus today. Walk up and down these aisles and pluck what thou wilt of sweetness for thyself!

THE CHURCH IS A GARDEN.

The church in my text is appropriately compared to a garden, because it is a place of choice flowers, of select fruits, and of thorough irrigation.

That would be a strange garden in So in the world outside the church, which there were no flowers. If no-Christ has planted a great many where else, they would be along the beautiful things-patience, charity, borders or at the gateway. The homeliest taste will dictate something, if it the choicest fruits to be in the garden. be only the old 'fashioned hollyhock or dahlia or daffodil.
