The Czar of Russia, who becomes 32 years old on Friday, May 18, must have read, with much envy, the accounts of Queen Victoria's drives in Ireland with a guard of only four policemen. Except in his own palaces, the poor emperor could not stop a week in one place without serious consequences, while, should he drive out, the carriage is surrounded by several regiments of cavalry, and the route is out, the carriage is surrounded by several regiments of cavalry, and the route is never given out beforehand. Even when journeys on the railways are made two armored trains close together are run, and, with the exception of a few, no one knows in which the czar will travel. Then again, the whole line is guarded by soldiers within easy speaking distance of one another, and they are compelled to stand with their backs to the line when the Strawberry Preserves. Wisebaden housekeepers, in preserving strawberries, are said to follow the best rule for keeping the color and delicate flavor of this "best of berries." The Wiesbaden rule calls for honey instead of sugar; but, as honey is rather difficult to obtain, sugar is to be preferred to the other sweetening in adulterated form. Two lots of berries are selected, one to use for canning purposes and the other for the juice, smaller sized berries being selected for the juice. Both kinds must be sound and fully ripe. For every pound of the smaller berries allow half a pound of sugar and place in layers in an earthen bowl or stone crock over night. Cover the berries and keep them cool, in order to prevent fermentation, and they will make their own juice. The next morning drain off the juice, and honey or sugar in the proportion of the standard of the places on the team.

Excellent Fac: Cream.

Following is a simple but very effective face cream recipe: Ohe ounce each of spermaceti and white wax; five ounces of spermaceti and white wax; five ounces of strong rose water; fifteen grains of borax. Melt wax and spermaseti at a moderate heat, add the oil and warm. Remove from the fire and add the rose water in which the borax has previously been dissolved and fluff rapidly and continuously with an egg beater until the mixture becomes creamy. If the weather is chilly the rose water should be heated slightly. Do not stand in a draught while beating.

The next morning drain off the juice, and honey or sugar in the proportion of a quarter of a pound of honey or a half pound of sugar to each pint of juice. Boil this syrup down to one third of the original quantity, skimming off any froth that may arise. While the syrup is scalding, rinse the jars inside and outside with hot water; fill close with good, whole berries, fasten the lids partly and set in fruit racks or dripping pans in the bottom of which is a thick, wet towel, on the back of the range, to keep warm. Invert a wash boiler over the jars, to assist in retaining the heat. When the syrup is ready, pour into the jars quickly, using a silver spoon handle to push back the berries. Fill to the brim, so that no air remains in the jar; put on the elastic bands and screw on the covers as tightly as possible. Tighten them again when cold, wrap each jar in paper and put away in a dry closet or cool cellar. ex ship, delv'd

SOME CURIOUS EPITAPHS.

Thomas Hindle's Way of Expressing His Hopes in a Hereafter.

Collecting epitaphs is not a particularly cheerful sort of hobby, but a well-known Philadelphia business man has acquired the gruesome fad, and is now thoroughly saturated with all sorts of mortuary lore. Curious epitaphs find their way into print from time to time, many of which bear greatly traces of anthenticity, and these are copied from tombstones which have come under his own observation. He has any difference where he is, whether in an old English cathedral town, or a "boom city" of the far west, his first question is: Where is your most interesting burying ground?" While in England last summer the came across a course of rather mer he came across a couple of rather curious epitaphs in the old churchyard at Balsover, in Derbyshire. One read as follows: "Here lies in a horizontal position the outside case of Thomas Hindle, clock and watch maker, who depended this life. and watch maker, who departed this life wound up in hope of being taken in hand by his Maker, and being thoroughly clean-by his Maker, and being thoroughly cleaned, repaired and set a going in the world to come, on the 15th of August, 1836, in the nineteenth year of his age."

The following from the same churchyard, is a curious instance of economy such as one seldom encounters—that of a man being buried in the same grave with his three wives and with but one stone his three wives, and with but one stone to mark their final and collective resting place. Following is the inscription: "Sa-Baleover Moor, who departed this life August 2, 1835, agad thirty-three years. "Also William Armstrong, who died De-

There is a big boom in South African stamps. The war has enhanced their value and has enormously increased the demand for them.

Mr. F. R. Ginn, of the Strand, said:

"The great demand just now is for Free State stamps, commandeered by Lord Roberts when he entered Bloemfontein and converted with the letters 'V. R. I.' stamped upon them in black. People who are in the habit of using soap as an adjunct to personal cleanliness are apt to comment unkindly upon folks who do not follow their example. But soap is not an essential requisite for cleanliness. The Japanese who are credited with being the most cleanly people in the world rarely use soap, while the Russians use vapor baths for cleanliness. Napoleon used bran and lemon juced, and no soap except for shaving. In countries, where soft coal is used in excess soap
