

After some discussion, D. J. O'Donoghue said he had produced the sentiment he was seeking, and would withdraw his motion in favor of the amendment, which he did, and the latter becoming the main motion was carried.

John Armstrong moved, seconded by J. Gardiner,

"That the privilege of the floor be extended to all Trades' Unionists, Knights of Labor, and visiting brethren."

After considerable discussion, the motion was carried.

Considerable debate took place as to the mode of procedure in the discussion of the various questions, after which, the following motion, by A. F. Jury, seconded by J. Aldridge, was adopted:

"That a Standing Orders' Committee be appointed, to whom all resolutions shall be submitted, to be brought before the Convention in the order determined by them."

The Committee was appointed as follows: Messrs. Jury, Aldridge, Carey, Martin, Reed, Bedford, Rooney, McCord, and J. Armstrong.

Moved by J. Aldridge, seconded by J. R. Brown,

"That a Standing Committee on Ways and Means be appointed."

Carried.

The President appointed the following as such Committee; viz.: Messrs. C. Armstrong, Pettit, O'Donoghue, Brown, and Johnson.

Moved by J. Aldridge, seconded by D. J. O'Donoghue,

"That the Rules of Order of the Trades' and Labor Council, in so far as they apply, be made those governing the Convention."

Carried.

J. R. Brown said he hoped delegates who were instructed to introduce any particular question would do so now, so that two different persons might not be moving in the same direction at the same time.
