A Farmerette Seeks Advice

Dear Editor:—The writer has been a transient reader of your excellent publication for some time, enjoying its many features, which are always bright and helpful. Perhaps this is beyond the scope of your correspondence page but might she inquire, through your columns, if there are any young women in the western provinces moderately successful farming "on their own", if so, what circumstances and characteristics contributed to that success? Can a woman take up a homestead or what are the qualifications necessary to filing a claim? Is capital an indispensable asset and how much? Perhaps others might also be interested in this subject and the writer (who is a business woman of 25) would appreciate hearing from any lady or gentleman who cares to write, either personally or through the medium of the W.H.M. Thanking you, dear Editor. A Would-be-Farmerette.

Introducing Peter Pan

Dear Editor and Members:—I have been a silent but interested reader for a long time and I must say that the Correspondence Page of The Western Home Monthly is very interesting. Now for an introduction, and as there is no one to introduce me, I shall do so myself. I am a gay-hearted, carefree, and of course happy country girl, eighteen and one-half years of age, and am living with my grandmother as my father and mother died when I was but a little child. Grandmother often says that I will never grow up, and I must say that I do not care if I never do, as I'd simply hate to give up the jolly life that I have had on the farm, and even though I am now a stenographer, I always hike back to the farm after the day's work is over. I am very fond of riding and broncho busting and am never so happy as when I am tearing over the prairie on a broncho or a newly broken colt. I am also very fond of music and reading, and I have a piano of my own, and all the books and literature that I want, and there is not an evening goes by without my spending several hours at the piano and in my library. How many of the members are fond of art and fancywork. I am, and my Saturday afternoons and evenings are spent in drawing and painting and doing fancywork of some kind. I do a lot of embroidery and some crocheting and tatting and also some stencilling. I quite agree with "Cow Puncher" that the prairie life is the nicest life, but I certainly disagree with "A Young School Master" when he says that country life is lonely. I wish the "Two Idle Wyld Imps" would write to me as they are girls after my own heart, so to speak. I certainly think "A Canadian" was very fortunate in being able to see Reuben's Paintings, and I heartily envy him, and now I must explain why I think Reuben painted himself as a sinner, in his pictures. I think it was because Reuben was a true Christian and was not conceited or seeking praise for himself, and therefore he painted himself as the worst of mortals, and I think also, that he painted himself thus, because he thought so much more of everyone else than he did of himself. Well I must close now. Hoping that the other members will not condemn this letter too severely. I beg to say adieu, and be—Ever a Jolly Kid.

Cornbread is his Specialty

Dear Editor:—Having read numerous copies of The Western Home Monthly I am anxious to crush into the happy circle. I never miss a copy. It was sent to me overseas and believe me it was a great source of consolation to get a bit of real live Western breeze. Being more fortunate than a great many of my comrades I returned with a whole skin. The fourteenth day of May, A.D. 1919, I was ushered into civilized life (as distinguished from army life). It certainly seemed great to be free and unfettered by the shackles of militarism, but, Oh! girls, don't I find the homestead to be a lonely place after three years of high-powered double tension excitement. No wonder they are singing "How're you Goin' to Keep 'em Down on the Farm." Nevertheless I love farm life and I would not care to live anywhere else. In common with a great many others I am a bachelor and don't like to bach. It is disagreeable at best. However, I can bake cornbread (hog-food) second only to the negro mammy who taught me how to make it. A rapid saddle pony is an excellent tonic to drive away the blues. Good books on philosophy and poetry are also recommended. Robert W. Service is hard to beat when it comes to poetry. A slight sprinkling of light reading matter is far better than to be choked up with that stuff all the time. A little nonsense is a great relish, but too much is worse than none at all. "Connie Canuck's" views are quite sound. It is not for me to say who is the more deserving of credit, the soldier or the plow-pilot. However, I can vouch it requires no mean amount of courage to bach and do a lot of farming. All hail to the boys who farmed and farmed conscientiously during the war. Personally, I would rather fight a dozen battles than to say my only fight was my fight for exemption. However, in all cases where the exemption was granted without a fight and the boy farmed diligently, I would say he did his duty every inch. As for the tourists who visited relatives in England, Ireland or Scotland, granting that many a worthy lad made this trip, the government does not recognize their services as it does one who visited the trenches. Any glory they may boast is a matter of individual conceit and need not be considered. As we all know it is no easy matter to follow the teachings of the Bible. It is mighty stiff business. For instance it is hard to love a German, but I wish to say if we cannot love him let us not dissipate a lot of otherwise good energy in hating him for only weakness hates. Do any returned men of The Western Home Monthly circle of readers intend to buy a farm through the Soldiers' Land Settlement Board? I do, and also intend to build a home for two or more. Would be pleased to exchange views with anyone who is thinking of taking advantage of the government's offer. Would also be pleased to correspond with any feminine readers, and wish to assure them I will answer all letters promptly.—Yankee Canuck.

A Future Teacher

Dear Editor:—I wrote to your magazine some time ago, and being lucky enough to see my letter in print, I decided to try again. I do not agree with "Not a Crank." The Correspondence Page would be of little use if the readers did not exchange letters with one another. "Jolly Bachelor" is sensible and I'm sure I agree with him. It is certainly nice to get letters from different parts of Canada. Perhaps we had better give the boys time to think things over calmly. They have gone through and seen some terrible sights and it is natural they should dislike and almost hate anything German. I wish more school teachers would write to this page; I am going to be one myself in a year or so. "Sea Breeze" I think you are an American by birth, even if you are living in Canada, otherwise surely your brother would have been in the Canadian army, and you are of the feminine gender since you ask for R.N.W.M.P. and sailors to write to The Western Home Monthly. Be sure and let me know if I have guessed correctly. My letter is already long enough so I will close. If any of the readers care to write my address is with the Editor.—Gladiali.
