ENGLAND'S MILKING SHORT-HORNS

In competition with all the dairy breeds at the English Royal show, held recently at Nottingham, England, the milking Shorthorn was awarded championship honors as a milk cow. Included in the competition were Holsteins, Guernseys, Jerseys, Shorthorns, Lincoln Reds, Longhorns, Devons, South Devons, Red Polls, Ayrshires, Dexters and Kerries. "Charity 23rd," a pedigreed Shorthorn, won with a total score of 83.80 points.

According to the English point system in the milking tests, one point is allowed for every pound of milk given; four points for each per cent. of fat, and one point for each ten days lactation period after the first ten-day period. The winner, twelve days after calving, gave 68 pounds of milk, which tested 3.95 per cent. fat. The same owner's cow, "Primrose Gift," won second place, with a score of 80.85. She had been fresh for thirty-two days, and yielded 67.4 pounds of milk testing 3.4 per cent.

The British Dairy Shorthorn Association is making much of the milk producing capacity of the breed in that country. In his annual report, the secretary reports an official record of "Greenleaf 32nd." Her total milk production in 354 days was 14,286 pounds of milk, while "Wright's Red Rose 32nd" was a close follower with 14,163.5 pounds of milk. Many hold records of 9,000 pounds or more for a year's work. The breeders are sticking to the beef type as much as possible, and it is claimed the milking Shorthorns of Britain give a good account of themselves when sent to the block.

A COLD-BLOODED PROPOSITION

(By F. J. Dixon, in The Single Taxer)
"They're Fighting in Europe for Land No Better—If, Indeed, as Good as Manitoba's."

"Thousands upon thousands of these fighters, Europeans and even Americans, will flock to Manitoba farms when peace is declared."

"Only one result is possible—higher land values. Good farm land will never again be as cheap as it is today. Get in on the advance—it's bound to come—hold some of the land they'll be looking for yourself."

"Today the best values in Western Canada are within 50 miles of Winnipeg. Let me show you some of the farms I own in this district."

The above advertisement appeared in a city paper last week. One needs to read it twice and then think awhile to appreciate its sinister significance. Let us analyse it and see what it implies. In effect this cold and calculating advertisement says: "The common people are fighting in Europe for land which they will not get. After the war many of them will come to Manitoba looking for land upon which to make a living. Therefore while your fellow-men are fighting, grab as much land here as you can so that when they come and must have this land you can get rich by charging them an increased price for it." It should be borne in mind that Canada is sending hundreds of thousands of her sons across the sea to fight, and they also will need land when they return. After the South African War the government presented each volunteer with 160 acres of land, but, owing to the large number of volunteers, that will hardly be possible after this war. In fact, so much land, and the best at that, is now in the hands of speculators that the government would hardly have enough to go round. In the three prairie provinces the government owns some 30,000,000 acres, against some 100,000,000 acres in the hands of speculators. Surely, instead of allowing greedy speculators to calculate how to get rich by taking advantage of the men who return from the front, the government should be taking steps to make the land now in the hands of the speculators available for use by the men who have fought to defend it. A good stiff tax upon land values would be the best means of accomplishing this desirable end.
