In the foregoing lists of the name of those who have taken honors in general proficiency, says the Recorder, it noticeable that while there are more than twice as many pupils from the town as there are from the country, exactly half the names are those of country pupils. In the appended lists of the successful candidates at the deartmental examinations, the disparity much greater still, fourteen out of the twenty names being those of coun try pupils. Had the town pupils done as good work in proportion to their numbers in the school as their classmates from the country, the total number of names would have been about forty-five.
