

RICHEST SOIL IN AMERICA

Crescent City, Florida. June 25th, 1919. Florida Land Owners' Association, Crescent City, Fla.

Gentlemen: Coming from St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada, which is in perhaps the best fruit and truck farming belt in any Southern State, but after looking over many tracts in Florida, it remained for me to see the lands you were offering, and I must say that they are the RICHEST LANDS I have ever seen. I would be pleased to have any Canadian write me for further verification of this statement and can honestly recommend not only your wonderful lands but the Association as a whole. The easy terms you offer makes it possible for practically any one to purchase and no one need hesitate about buying before they examine the lands as I know you will select only the best, and make a better selection than the purchaser would himself. Wishing your Association much success I am, Very truly yours, David Beaver.

SOUPS.

Some Pointers for the Housewife.

In making a soup of good stock it is wiser and cheaper to make enough to last two or three days. When thoroughly cooked, strain and set to cool, then remove the grease, pour on enough stock for one serving and set the rest away to keep cool.

Vegetables or any other edible garnish may then be added. Should any soup be left over strain and set aside to add to the next day's portion, but do not turn it in into the unused stock.

In making stock a quart of water is allowed usually to a pound of meat. To give body to thin soups add a little barley, rice, arrowroot, cornstarch, potato flour rubbed to a cream, with a bit of butter, gelatine or rice flour that has been worked free of lumps with a little water or stock.

If a soup made without tomato needs a little acid to flavor it add the juice of a lemon, orange or ripe grapefruit. Leeks, cucumbers, pounded celery seed, burnt vinegar and sweet herbs are all valuable additions for stock making. If one is the proud possessor of an herb garden, then all the flavorful herbs may be dried or preserved in spirits of wine for cooking use.

An odd Oriental fancy is to make a puree of beans so thick that it hardens when cold; then a clear soup is made and slices of the bean curd are put in each portion. It is delicate and very rich and nourishing. Still another idea from the Far East is to make tiny fritters, holding one or two shrimps each, serving two or three in each portion. In Russia a favorite soup has sliced apples poached on top just before serving.

TREASURE FROM SEA.

The sea is full of queer things and queer tricks. At Thornpess, for instance, recently, the sea revealed treasure that had been hidden for hundreds of years. As the tide ebbed the sands were found to be littered with hundreds of coins—gold, silver and bronze—dating from early Saxon times. There were also antique bronze rings and ornaments that will fetch many pounds to their fortunate finders from collectors. At the Inquest—which, by the way, is invariably held on such treasure trove—it was decided that the find was not crown property.

Everyone knows the story of how King John's treasure was overwhelmed in the Wash. Confirmation of this was given a few days ago when a solid gold circlet was cast up by the sea at Wolfertan. Before Cromer became a pleasure holiday resort its place was taken by the old town of Shipden, which now lies beneath the waves. These waves brought from Shipden, on to the sands of Cromer hundreds of gold nobles and silver pennies, most of which were bought up by antiquarians, who had immediately rushed up to Cromer on hearing of the discovery.

A boy was playing along the rocky coast of North Wales a short time ago, and trying to lift many of the loose rocks saw a sparkling object lying undisturbed beneath one of them. On being fished up this proved to be a valuable gold ring. When inquiries were made it was found that it belonged to an old resident of the district, who had lost it in the sea more than thirty years ago when bathing.

About seventy miles off the coast of Southern California lies the Island of San Nicholas, a horrible spot, all sand and loose pumice stone. No one had landed there for years, and it was always believed that it was uninhabited and uninhabitable. Imagine therefore, the surprise of those who knew this wild and desolate spot to learn, seven or eight years ago, that one man had resided there for some years.

He had been steadily collecting the treasure cast up by the sea from the many wrecks along the coast. He, perhaps, had more reason to think the sea a valuable storehouse than most people, for when he returned to civilization he brought back with him in gold and silver, both coins and bars, upwards of $150,000, all picked up on the beach. Moreover, he had a fine collection of antiques which brought him a small fortune.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Color of Pure Copper.

The work of a Swiss investigator suggests that absolutely pure copper may have light gray color like that of moist other metals, since it is found that other coppers which have been ten times distilled in vacuo has only a pale rose color, while the yellow color of gold becomes much lighter under similar treatments.

GRIM TALE OF SEA.

Mad Captain's Suicide After Shooting at Crew.

Full of sad details, a tragedy of the sea came to light at Cardiff. It appears that the little French schooner Auguste, of St. Malo, left Swansea for Calais. The crew consisted of the master, Captain Genereaux Selgauer, about 30, married, and a native of Morthe-sur-Gironde, the mate, second mate, one A.B., and a boy, and two naval gunners attached to the gun which the little ship carried—seven all told. Shortly after passing the Mumbles they experienced bad weather, which continued until they were well down Channel, but in a sorry plight, the sails having been torn to ribbons, one of the masts gone, and the schooner making no headway, leaking, and at the mercy of heavy seas. Signals of distress were sent up and the gun was fired, but there was no sign of any approaching vessel to give assistance. When the vessel was in this helpless state the ship's boat was lowered and boarded by the mate and the two gunners. A big sea then tore the schooner and boat apart and the latter drifted away. Those left on board the schooner watched the boat being tossed from wave to wave quite out of control, and in a short time they saw one of the gunners fall out of the boat and sink immediately. Later the two survivors were rescued by the steamer Gunberk. A tug was sighted and came alongside, the mate and gunner going aboard of her in order to make a search for the Auguste, and the Gunberk proceeding on her course. As the night was falling the Auguste was sighted and the tug made for her, but when they got within hailing distance the crew of the tug were astounded to see the captain gesticulating frantically and firing a revolver at them. It was a weird, unnerving position, and the tug had to keep away instead of rendering assistance, because of the captain's strange conduct. They, however, kept the schooner in view throughout the night, and about 7.30 a. m. they approached again. This time the captain was not to be seen, and the mate and surviving gunner, together with some of the tug's crew, went aboard. An astonishing state of things met their gaze, and they were told a story of tragedy and horror. It seems that when the boat drifted away the captain became frantic because of the helpless position in which he found himself in a seemingly sinking ship. He must have lost his reason, for he got his automatic pistol and started firing at the remaining three members of his crew, who had to seek shelter wherever they could from him. One of the men was shot in the upper lip. By a subterfuge the captain was eventually secured in his cabin, where he was barricaded in, all the timber and heavy articles to hand being piled up against the door and on top of the cabin to prevent his escape. It was evident that the captain had gone stark mad, for he kept firing bullets. After some time everything became quiet in the cabin, but no one dared to investigate what had happened there. The tug took the schooner to tow to Cardiff. When the cabin was entered a terrible spectacle presented itself. The unfortunate captain was found dead on the floor, with a French service rifle near him. It was evident that he had placed the barrel of the rifle under his chin and shot himself, the bullet coming out at the top of the head. On the bed was found the pistol, which was seen to have become clogged owing to a cartridge having stuck in the barrel. The whole cabin was riddled with bullets and in indescribable disorder, the floor being covered with spent cartridges.

WHEN ROTHSCHILD PAID HEAVILY.

Here is an illustration of the tricks in trade to which unscrupulous dealers in antiques will resort to get large prices for their wares. The two parties were Alessandro Castellani, a clever dealer, and Baron Adolph Rothschild of Paris. Castellani had a superb enamelled ewer, with the dish on which it stood. The Baron on arriving in Rome visited Castellani's shop and was shown the best things the dealer had except the enamelled dish and ewer. When everything else had been inspected Castellani drew from a hidden cupboard and dish, but not the ewer. The Baron was so pleased with the dish that he agreed to buy the lot of which it was a part. The Baron paid heavily, lamenting that there was no ewer to stand on the dish, and departed for Florence.

There he was visited by an agent would fit into the hollow of the dish, to sell several beautiful majolica pieces. He visited her house and was disappointed, as the majolica was fine enough. The old lady, seemingly chagrined, left the room to order refreshments, and the Baron saw through the open door of a bedroom a ewer, covered by a glass shade, on which rested a wreath of immortelles.

When the lady returned the Baron asked permission to examine the ewer. It was brought out and the Baron saw that the enamel was of the same work as that of the dish he had bought. He wished, however, to be certain that the foot of the ewer would fit into the hollow of the dish. The Baron went back to his rooms and the foot of the ewer fitted perfectly. The next day the Baron sent the agent to offer the old lady a princely sum for the ewer. He brought back a refusal to sell. Eul at last the widow's scruples were overcome. Castellani, with his Italian cunning, had planned the whole affair.

Vegetable Diet.

A well-balanced diet does not necessitate much meat. The leaf vegetables, like cabbage, spinach, celery, onions, etc., are now in their prime, and should be used as the basis of a number of appetizing dishes. Supplemented as they can be by a liberal allowance of milk, cereals and a limited number of eggs, the proper food values are fully maintained.

CHOLERA INFANTUM

Cholera infantum is one of the fatal ailments of childhood. It is a trouble that comes on suddenly, especially during the summer months, and unless prompt action is taken little or no many soon be beyond aid. Baby's Ova Tablets are an ideal medicine in warding off this trouble. They regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus prevent all the dreaded summer complaints. They are an absolutely safe medicine being guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no opiates or narcotics or other harmful drugs. They cannot possibly do harm—they always do good. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TOWN PLANNING.

On Compulsory Basis Adopted by Britain.

Town planning in Great Britain has so far advanced beyond the experimental stage that it has now been decided to make it compulsory for every town, having 20,000 inhabitants or more, to submit a town planning scheme for its own area to the local Government Board not later than 1926. Such a scheme must embrace the limitation of possible densities per acre, define the portion of a site area to be covered with buildings, the character of the buildings, the lines of arterial roads and the provision of open spaces.

The British people realize that haphazard growth of towns leads to serious evils, and they are determined to control it. In future, land will have to be developed so as best to serve the interests of the community, which, in the long run, is usually in the interests of the landholders themselves. Only the land speculator is adversely affected. If the public wish to put back individual out of business they cannot do it more effectively than by actively promoting proper schemes of town planning.

In Canada, the Province of Nova Scotia took the lead in making town planning compulsory in 1915. The only other Province which has a compulsory act is Saskatchewan. These are therefore the only two Provinces abreast of the old country in town planning progress, though most of our provinces have enabling acts in force.

Woodpecker Nests On Sale.

It may sound like a joke to speak of the manufacture of woodpecker nests, but there is actually a factory in Maine that takes many orders for such nests.

The bird houses are constructed of pine blocks fifteen inches long and from five to six in diameter. The back of the block is squared to permit of the patent adjustment being properly attached to the tree or placed where the house is to be located, a canopy or top piece to keep out the weather being made like a roof. A perfect nest is drilled by a reamer. Within three inches of the bottom a corkscrew indentation is made to the bird entrance, as the toes of the woodpecker are in pairs, two before and two behind, with sharp, strong claws, the whole structure of the foot making it adaptable for climbing.

The houses are sold to orchard owners, as the claim is made by the ornithologists that the woodpecker's feed consists chiefly of insects and their larvae which the birds get by digging into the bark and wood of trees. The woodpecker's tongue is an important instrument in obtaining this feed, as it can be extended far beyond the bill, its tip being horny and furnished with a barbed filament.

WOULD ABOLISH MONEY.

Japanese Prescription for Bringing in a Paradise of Peace.

We will make here a suggestion which furnishes us a method to prevent the appearance of the rich, and avert the consequent result of the difference between rich and poor. The suggestion consists of the entire disuse of the money over the world, in order to give the struggle for existence a check, to make way with the differences of rich and poor, and thus to promote peace and equality in the public life of mankind.

It is through the medium of the money that wealth is accumulated, and the accumulation entails the difference of rich and poor, with its resultant struggle for existence. This state of things is most undesirable. The end of mankind is not to be proud of individual talent or ability, but to co-enjoy the peace in the world, just as in a family, and any cause which brings about any inequality in public life must be radically eliminated. It is for this reason that we dare to suggest the disuse of the money to prevent the difference of rich and poor.

What crafty fellow ever introduced the money for use in human life? Of course, nationalism of various values, such as gold, silver, jewels, etc., shall be implied in the disuse of the money and their ownership by individuals be prohibited. Such valuables retain their value only when they are used as a means of inequality, but will be nothing more than these pebbles on the road when equality is to be prevalent. They may have some value in giving us a good feeling on account of their elegance, then they may be used, under public ownership, for the decoration of shrines, temples, churches, halls and many other like buildings to the common pleasure of the public at large.

Most complicated troubles may arise from the adjustment of properties after the enforcement of the disuse of the money. With the proposed suggestion mines, railroads, ships, electric and gas plants, waterworks and many other properties essential to the common interest of a nation shall be transferred to the national ownership, not to say of the nationalization of land, and they shall be equally compensated for, as for the confiscation of money and several bonds, with a kind of registration bonds newly issued for the purpose, which should have the characteristic of temporary transitional means until an improved feature makes its appearance in a new society.

In other regards individuals may be permitted to retain their own property, personal and real, and maintain their professions or occupations. Transaction shall be carried on by the exchange of kind in kind, or barter. But as barter is too inconvenient to be enforced, a ticket system may be taken for the remedy of this defect. As has been stated, our ideal disuse of the money does not admit any accumulations of wealth, and so the tickets shall be given each a certain period of time, say ten, twenty, thirty years or more, during which they can be in use, and after which their circulation ceases.

When this is accomplished, there can be no more complaints, no more dissatisfactions, no more contradictions, and no more misunderstandings, and the world will be reorganized into a paradise of peace.—Seijiro Dawashima in Dal Nippon.

PREVENT FIRES.

Follow These Rules and Help the Good Work.

- 1. Matches—Be sure your match is out. Pinch it before you throw it away.
2. Tobacco—Throw pipe ashes and cigar or cigarette stumps in the dust of the road and stamp or pinch out the fire before leaving them. Don't throw them into brush, leaves or needles.
3. Making camp—Build a small campfire. Build it in the open, not against a tree or log or near brush. Escape away the trash from all around it.
4. Leaving Camp—Never leave a campfire, even for a short time, without quenching it with water and then covering it with earth.
5. Bonfires—Never build bonfires in windy weather or where there is the slightest danger of their escaping from control. Don't make them larger than you need.
6. Fighting Fires—If you find a fire, try to put it out. If you can't, get word of it to the nearest forest ranger at once.
The above rules for the prevention of fires, prepared by the United States Forest Service, are equally applicable to Canada. Their observance would go far towards lessening the tremendous toll taken each year by the forest fire fiend.

Farmhouses Modernized.

As farmhouses become adapted to the taste of the women who are, in so many cases, taking over their management, it is found that many of the old institutions of the farmhouse—the parlor, the many small rooms, the dark halls—are disappearing. Partitions are torn out to make spacious living rooms; porches are added, and everything is arranged for the utmost convenience of the housekeeper who is also tender of the fields.—Exchange.
