DR. S. GOLDBERG.
The possessor of 14 diplomas and certificates, no wants no money that he does not earn. order to convince patients that he has the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg will accept your case for treatment, and you need not pay one penny until a complete cure has been made; he wants to hear from patients who have been unable to get cured, as he guarantees a positive cure for chronic, nervous, blood and skin diseases, such as eczema, psoriasis, and all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney troubles, blood poisoning, physical and nervous debility, lack of vitality, stomach trouble, etc. The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up; so he has made it a rule to ask for money unless he cures you, and when you are cured, he feels sure that you will pay him a small fee. It seems, therefore, that it is to the best interests of everyone who suffers to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him, which will receive careful attention, and a correct diagnosis of your case will be made free of charge; if you have lost faith write him, as you have everything to gain and nothing to lose; you must remember that all medicines for patients are prepared in his own laboratory to meet the requirements of each individual case. He will send a booklet on the subject, which contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply, Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Ave., Room 111, Detroit, Michigan. Medicines for Canadian patients sent from Windsor, Ont., consequently there is no duty to be paid.

PYGMIES FROM AFRICA

SOMETHING NEW AGAIN FROM CONTINENT OF WONDERS.

Denizens of the Central African Forest Induced to Visit the World's Capital—Their Language and Customs Decidedly Primitive—Men Are Not Chivalrous, and They Have Best Berths in Straw-Strewn Abodes.

Still out of Africa come the world's new things. Recently a British explorer, Mr. J. J. Harrison, came across a race of pygmies in Central Africa, a race of whose existence stories were not infrequently heard in the equatorial region, but no member of which had ever before been seen by a white man. Mr. Harrison, says The London Daily Chronicle, having by kindly treatment induced six of them to visit the land of the giant white man, preceded them to England, leaving a Sudanese Arab, Mahomet Hamed, in care of the tiny folk. The Arab, a bearded, well-knit young man, with intelligent, deeply scarred face, has managed to make himself acquainted with the weird language, if such it may be called, of his charges.

Their speech, as a matter of fact, consists merely of "clucking," a noise made by pressing the tongue against the roof of the mouth, and though, of course, to the unknown ear it is perfectly unintelligible, the Arab and the pygmies succeeded in conversing with evident ease.

Elderly Children.
[and what a curious spectacle did they afford on the Orestes, as they toddled about the deck. The tallest of the party is only a trifle over four feet high, and, save that their years are unmistakably written on their copper-colored faces, they look like mere children. There are four men, their names and approximate ages being: Bokani, the chief, aged 35; Matuka, aged 28; Mafutimani, aged 22, and Mongongu, aged 18, while the two women are Amuriapi, aged 32, and Kuarko, aged 22. The men are attired in black cloths, with hoods, and the women in blue serge dresses, obviously not of perfect fit.

All of them are distinguished by woolly hair and strikingly flat noses, while the venerable Bokani can lay claim to a straggling moustache and beard. He undoubtedly is the most interesting of the pygmies. That he means to be respected by his companions even in the over-awing presence of the white man cannot for one moment be doubted. Upon the womenfolk he looks with the profoundest contempt, and armed with a fly whisk, which he used with quite unnecessary frequency while reclining on deck, he did not fail to show them that he was a much superior personage. So even pygmies have their social distinctions! Are Not Chivalrous.

But, painful though the fact may be, it must be stated to their discredit that all the male pygmies are lacking in civility. When the women "clucked" at them, they rarely "cluck" a response, and in their straw-strewn abode on the Orestes the men always secured the most comfortable "berths."

But most shocking of all is the discovery that at Cairo, when Amuriapi fell sick, Chieftain Bokani was most anxious to kill her, saying that she had lived long enough.

The most good-humored of the whole half dozen is unquestionably the youthful Mongongu, whose smile appears to be of the kind that won't come off. Miss Kuarko, however, is far more dignified, and when an intrepid visitor attempted to enter into conversation she looked exceedingly bored. Indeed, being perhaps the least ugly of the band, she is a little conceited, and for fully an hour during a trip up the Thames she found entertainment in seeing her reflection in the looking glass.

New Delight of the Bath.
When, after their stay in London, these pygmies go back to the African forest, they will probably have little respect for their stay-at-home brethren. On the Orestes they started an acquaintance with the wash tub, and so greatly did they favor this novelty that they have since rejoiced in a daily bath.

Then, too, some of the sailors acted the part of schoolmaster, and gave them their first lesson in handwriting. It is true that the result was not altogether gratifying. Chieftain Bokani started by chewing his pencil, and finding it unpalatable, consented to copy his name. But he would use only his left hand, and when he had finished his task it was found that each letter resembled a rough drawing of a spear, which led the sailors to think seriously of their undertaking.

Coming up the Channel they indulged in a peculiar dance, which seemed to be a religious rite. Humming melodiously, like the singing of trees in a forest, the men moved, slipping their feet lightly along the deck, headed by the chieftain, and then circled joyously around. Assuming a solemn mien, they stamped their feet and, facing the sun, bowed themselves low. While thus engaged they were offered an empty biscuit tin as the only available musical instrument whereon to do their drumming, but scornfully they refused it.

A Horse on Him.
An Englishman was driving on an outside car in Dublin a few days ago. Noticing the horse looked worn out, he remarked to the jarvey: "Well, Pat, that seems a very poor horse you have."

"Bedad, yer honor," came the reply, "he's worse than poor; he's the unluckiest horse iver was!"
"Indeed," replied the Englishman, "and may I ask why?"
"Well, now, I'll tell yer honor. For the last four mornin's O've tressed him whether he'd have his breakfast or he'd have a drink, and bedad O've won every time!"—London Tatler.

$500 REWARD FOR WOMEN

WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

So uniformly successful has Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription proven in all forms of Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of the Uterus, and Leucorrhoea, that, after over a third of a century's experience in curing the worst cases of these distressing and debilitating ailments, Dr. Pierce now feels fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in cash for any case of these diseases which he cannot cure.

IT STANDS ALONE.—The "Favorite Prescription" stands alone, as the one and only remedy for these distressing common forms of weakness, possessed of such positively specific curative properties as to warrant its makers in proposing, and binding themselves to forfeit, as we, the undersigned proprietors of that wonderful remedy hereby do, to pay the sum of $500 in legal money of the United States in any case of the above diseases in which after a fair and reasonable trial of our treatment, we fail to cure. No other medicine for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments is backed by such a remarkable guarantee; no other medicine for woman's ills is possessed of the unparalleled curative properties that would warrant its manufacturers in making such an offer; no other remedy has such a record of cures on which to base such a remarkable offer.

Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and turn your back on any unscrupulous dealer who would insult your intelligence by attempting to foist upon you some inferior substitute, under the plea that "it is just as good." Insist on having the article which has a record of a third of a century of cures and which is backed by those willing to forfeit $500 if they cannot cure you.

In cases attended by a leucorrhoeal drain a solution of Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets should be used conjointly with the use of the "Favorite Prescription." They are sold by all druggists, and each box has an address, on receipt of 25 cents in stamps. Send 50 cents in stamps for Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. Address World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y.

Weak and sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

DID HER BIDDING.

His Brave Attempt to Pass for an Old Married Man.

"Now, Henry," said the bride, "I want you to understand distinctly that I do not wish to be taken for a bride. I am going to act exactly as if I were an old married woman. So, dearest, do not think me cold and unloving if I treat you very practically when there is anybody by."

"I don't believe I can pass for an old married man," said Henry. "I am so fond of you that I am bound to show it. I am sure to betray myself."

"No, you mustn't. It's easy enough, and I insist that you behave just like all old married men do. Do you hear?"

"Well, darling, I'll try, but I know I shall not succeed."

On the first evening of their arrival at their hotel the bride retired, and the groom fell in with a whisk party, with whom he sat playing cards till 4 o'clock in the morning. His wife spent the weary hours in weeping.

At last he turned up and met his grief-stricken bride with the hilarious question: "Well, ain't I doing the old married man like a daisy?"

She never referred to the subject again, and everybody in future knew that they had just been married.

Song of the Flame.

Fire can be made to sing. A writer says: "Take a lighted candle and blow gently against the flame. You will hear a peculiar fluttering sound. The fluttering sound is fire's first attempts at music. Instead of the unsteady breath of our lips let us employ the steady blast of a blowpipe. Instead of the pale and flickering light of a candle let us use the bright and ardent glare of a chemist's lamp. When you have a lamp and blowpipe you can make fire sing in earnest."

NEW BRITISH SPEAKER.

Honor to James William Lowther, Parliamentarian of Great Experience.

Mr. James William Lowther (Conservative), Deputy Speaker and chairman of the committee on Ways and Means, has been unanimously elected Speaker of the House of Commons in succession to Mr. William Count Gully, who recently resigned. This is the first time since 1833 that the Conservatives have been able to put one of their own party in the chair. After the election the House adjourned until June 29.

Right Hon. J. W. Lowther has been a member of the House of Commons for twenty-two years, for the last ten of which he has been chairman of Ways and Means and Deputy Speaker, usually presiding over the House in the absence of the Speaker. Mr. Lowther is fifty years of age. He is the son of the

The chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means in the British House of Commons is practically Assistant Speaker. He holds office until the dissolution of the Parliament in which he is elected. Though nominated by the Government, he is regarded as an officer of the House, with a salary of $12,500. He usually presides when the House is in committee. His place is not in the chair of the Speaker, but at the table where the clerk who retires with the Speaker has sat.

Louis Philippe and Soult.

Louis Philippe knew that Marshal Soult clung to power, and that his fall would be bitter to him. But when the time came the future ministers, with Thiers at their head, were assembled at the Tuileries, while in the next room Louis Philippe broke the news to Soult. The interview took a long time, and the new ministers were not without some apprehension. Finally the door was opened just enough to allow the King's queer pear-shaped head to pass, and he whispered: "A little patience, gentlemen! Just a little patience—we are weeping together."

A Useful Member.

The small son of a clergyman who was noted for his tiresome sermons overheard two friends of his father saying how dry they were, and how hard it was to keep awake during them. The following Sunday, while the minister was preaching, he was astounded to see his son throwing pebbles at the congregation from the gallery. The clergyman frowned angrily at him, when the boy piped out in a clear treble voice: "It's all right, pop. You go on preaching; I'm keeping them awake."

A Polite Enquiry.

During the South African war the censorship of soldiers' letters home was very strict. One soldier, who always sent an account of the doings of the regiment, which account was always blotted out by the censor, laid a plan for revenge. At the foot of his next letter he wrote: "Look under the stamp." The censor did so, after spending considerable time in scanning the stamp from the envelope. And he found these words: "Was it hard to get off?"—London Chronicle.
