THE RUSSIAN MODE OF WARFARE.

Surely those Russians are the politest enemies that ever an army had to deal with. They are always on the alert to save our men trouble. If a demonstration is made against their ships, instantly the vessels are sunk by their own hands. If indications are given of a serious desire to take one of their forts, it is blown up forthwith. It would not in the least surprise us to learn that, after blowing up the fortifications on Otchakoff Point, the Russian commander had despatched a flag of truce to express a regret, that the laziness of his soldiers, or their uncertainty as to our wishes, had prevented their doing as much to the forts at Kinburn. These exploits of the Muscovites impart to their Emperor's visit to the southern parts of his dominions, a character unprecedented in his history. We read of many kings and kaisers who have repaired to the theatre of war, to go through the form of receiving the submission of towns, fortresses, or armies, that had previously been reduced to extremities by their generals. But Alexander II is the first sovereign on record who has travelled so far to witness, with his own eyes, the dexterity with which his soldiers can destroy and evacuate their own defences. The Roman Emperor who went from Rome to the Belgian coast to witness a sham embarkation for the conquest of Britain, has hitherto been thought the most sublime nunny on record: his laurels must fade in comparison with the Russian Emperor, who has travelled from St. Petersburg to Odessa to witness an unresisted irruption into his own dominions. How the news of his passive exploits may be received at St. Petersburg it is not easy to conjecture. When the inhabitants of that capital learned that their Black Sea fleet had been sunk by the orders of Prince Menschikoff, and that their forts around South Sebastopol had been blown up by the orders of Prince Gortschakoff, they could console themselves by the reflection that these misadventures could only happen in the absence of their Emperor—their God upon earth. But their Emperor has gone to the scene of action, and matters go on in his presence, exactly as they did in his absence. May not this shake their confidence in his miraculous power to protect them? And may not the consequent want of faith in him prepare an indifferent reception for his imperial majesty on his return? The reverence with which the Russians regard their sovereign borders on idolatry: but old chronicles, tell us, how the worshippers of idols have-ere now, when tired with praying to their wooden gods without effect, tried whether they could not beat them into better behaviour. If the Russians have ever read the story of the man who, tired out with fruitless prayers to his idol threw it rudely down from its pedestal, and was rewarded by a stream of gold coin which having been deposited in a cavity of the image, flowed from it when broken, they may be tempted to repeat the experiment upon their own flesh and blood divinity. But possibly the politeness of the Russians, in saving the allies the trouble of destroying their ships and forts, is the result of some deep laid scheme. We may read in the next number of the Journal de St. Petersburg that comes to hand, an exposition of the Machiavelian policy of its Government.

Extract from the Circular of Cunard, Brett and Austin, of the 25th October, 1855.
In the year 1852 and '53, as well as the early part of 1854, the demand for ships of 1000 tons and upwards, became so great that vessels of this class advanced to unusually high prices, while vessels from 100 to 600 tons remained comparatively low. The result has been the production in excess of large ships when estimated by the supply of small, while the demand for the latter continues good.—The models, however, of the great bulk of small vessels now in the market are exceptional, and are not suited to the present requirements of trade. To make such more marketable, they should not in length be less than five times their width, sharp entrance, and clean run, with long flat floors; and in proportion to the increased length, they should have keels, kelsons, bilges, and waterways proportionately increased in strength so that they would combine with sailing, carrying, and light drafts, strength and fitness to take the ground, if required.

According to the Leeds Mercury, Colonel Rawlinson has just discovered among the ruins of ancient Babylon an extensive library—not indeed printed on paper, but impressed on baked bricks—containing many and voluminous treatises on astronomy, mathematics, ethnology, and several other most important branches of knowledge.—These treatises contain facts and arguments which, in his opinion, will have no small effect on the study of the sciences to which they relate, and, indeed, on almost every branch of learning, and which throw great light upon Biblical history, and criticism, and the history of our race.

A QUAKER'S LETTER TO HIS WATCH-MAKER.—I herewith send thee my pocket clock, which greatly standeth in need of thy friendly correction. The last time he was at thy friendly school, he was in no way reformed nor in the least benefited thereby; for I perceive by the index of his mind, that he is a liar, and the truth is not in him! that his motions are wavering and irregular; that his pulse is sometimes slow, which betokeneth not an even temper; and at other times, it waxeth sluggish, notwithstanding I frequently urge him; when he should be on his duty, as thou knowest his usual name denoteth, I find him slumbering, or, as the vanity of human reason phraseth, I catch him napping. Examine him, therefore and prove him, I beseech thee, thoroughly, that thou mayest, being well acquainted with his inward frame, and disposition turn him from the error of his way, and show him the way wherein he should go. It grieves me to think, and when I ponder thereon, I am verily of opinion, that his body is foul, and the whole mass is corrupt. Cleanse him, therefore, with thy charming physic, from all pollution, that he may vibrate and circulate according to the truth. I will place him a few days under thy care, and pay for his board as thou requirest. I entreat thee, friend John, to demean thyself on this occasion with judgment, according to the gift which is in thee, and prove thyself a workman. And when thou layest thy correcting hand upon him, let it be without passion, lest thou shouldst drive him to destruction. Do thou regulate his motion for a time to come, by the motion of the light that ruleth the day; and when thou findest him converted from the error of his way and more conformable to the above mentioned rules, then do thou send him home, with the just bill of charges drawn out in the spirit of moderation, and it shall be sent to thee, the root of all evil.
