fighting form and attacked the Nationalists without mercy. There were about 10,000 at the meeting. Elaborate preparations were made to receive Sir Wilfrid. Sir Wilfrid remarked on rising to speak that it was his second appearance before the electorate of St. Eustace, the first occasion having been in 1896. He pointed out that when the Liberal government had replaced the Conservative admission, ruin had not overwhelmed the manufacturers as the prophets of the day had promised. The most partisan of Conservatives must admit that the country had never enjoyed such prosperity as today. He quoted statistics on natural products, showing what Canada would save by the removal of the tariff duties.
