CHAPTER XIV.

"Poch! He couldn't have done that."

"Couldn't he?" she said, with a curious look at me. "You don't know Raby St. George?"

And again I felt that I did not want to know him. He must indeed be something out of the common way to over-awe such a high-spirited darling little creature as Natalie Orme.

"What did he say about your coming to England, Nat?"

"He didn't know. Business had taken him to the other side of the island."

"Do you think he's likely to come after you?"

"Don't speak of it!" she answered, with another shiver.

"But what made you hate him so? Was he old?"

"Old? No—about as old as Doctor Yorke, I should think."

"Ugly, then?"

"No, no! That wouldn't make me hate anybody. He was the handsomest man I ever saw, I think."

"Then—"

"Hush!" cried Nat, rising and checking me with her little cold hand upon my lips. "Here comes madame. Don't say a word, Ned. Mind, I trust you not to speak of Raby St. George."

"But look here," I whispered, hastily, in her ear, as madame opened the door and came serenely sweeping in, "did he—well, love you, you know?"

"Yes, dreadfully," she whispered back, with another shiver.

CHAPTER XVI.

"How exceedingly tiresome!" said madame, in a vexed tone.

My Digestion Is Now Good

And I Feel Like a Young Man Since Using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Prof. A. T. Smith.

What a horrible condition the digestive system gets into when the liver becomes sluggish and the bowels constipated. The poisonous waste matter is thrown back into the blood stream and finds its way into all parts of the body, causing pains and aches and feelings of fatigue and misery.

It is wonderful how quickly Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills sweep the poisons from the digestive system and enable the organs of digestion to resume their natural functions.

Prof. A. T. Smith, 1 Mt. Charles street, Montreal, and formerly of Boston, Mass., writes:—"I suffered for many years from bad digestion, constipation and horrible backaches. I have been treated by many doctors without any result. One day a friend in Boston advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. After using two boxes I noticed great improvement, and after the fourth box I was completely cured. My digestion is good. I never feel any pain in the back. My head is clear and I feel like a young man. I think Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are one of the best medicines on earth."

the dress-maker the message, and then started off at a smart trot for home again. It was not until we reached the junction I have described before, where the road branched off on the left to Chavasse, that Nat checked her horse to ask me—

"What time is it, Ned?" I pulled out my watch.

"Twenty minutes past five."

"Then don't let us go home yet—everything is so topsy-turvy."

"It will be precious dark directly," I said, dubiously.

"Nonsense—the moon will be up in a little while, and there is no hurry. It is more than a couple of hours to dinner-time. It is so jolly out, I don't like going in."

"What do you want to do, then?" I asked, practically, for of course the little lady must have her own way.

"Let us ride round by the river and then back through the village. There is plenty of time, and it is my favorite ride."

There was plenty of time, and I had nothing to say against it, so round by the river we went. A lonely ride it was. On the further bank of the little stream, so gay and rippling in the sunlight, so dark and sultry now, with a treacherous little gleam of foam showing here and there upon its surface, a great plantation of young firs stretched away somberly, their sharp black tops seeming to meet and cleave the iron-gray sky, while upon our side the bridge-path, rough and irregular, and winding here and there down to the water's edge, as backed by a thick belt of huge trees, which stretched their great bare boughs over us, here and there touching our heads as we rode.

"es, it was a dismal sort of place, that river bridge-path; and never did I look more dismal than in the gathering gloom of that December afternoon, with the dark river rolling slowly by it, and the shadows of the drooping branches falling over it. Its eerie aspect seemed to affect Nat, for she gave a little shiver as we turned our horses' heads from it at last.

"What's the matter?" I said, laughing. "Some one walking over your grave?"

"I don't know how it is, but that orrid road always makes me feel w-spirited," she returned.

"Don't wonder. When I was a youngster, I know I used to be scared enough by it."

"It looks fit for a murder," Nat said, glancing back nervously over her shoulder. "Look at that great rroup of pollard willows close to the water's edge. Fancy coming along one night when the moonlight was making everything look ghastly, and finding a dead man lying in the shadow, all stiff and bleeding, perhaps."

"Here, I say, drop that, young lady!" I said, wondering what had come over her, as I looked at her great dilating eyes. "You're giving me cold hills down the back. What put such fancies into your head?"

She gave herself a little shake in her saddle and laughed, looking round lowly at me.

"Oh, I don't know! The fancy got old of me, Ned. If I stayed here much longer, I should think that I could really see a dead man lying here."

"Oh, all right. Then it strikes me that the sooner we quit the better," I said.

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly. Money Refunded if it Fails.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in gualic acid and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pine and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan is often being imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. It is low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction. Money promptly refunded, goes with the recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or we get it for you. If not, send to T. Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

Doctors Could Not Help Mrs. Templeton—Regained Health through Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Hooper, Nebraska.—"I am very glad to tell how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me. For five years I suffered from female troubles so I was scarcely able to do my work. I took doctors' medicines and used local treatments but was not helped. I had such awful bearing down pains and my back was so weak I could hardly walk and could not ride. I often had to sit up nights to sleep and my friends thought I could not live long. At my request my husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I commenced to take it. By the time I had taken the seventh bottle my health had returned and I began doing my washing and was a well woman. At one time for three weeks I did all the work for eighteen boarders with no signs of my old trouble returning. Many have taken your medicine after seeing what it did for me. I would not take $1000 and be where I was. You have my permission to use my name if it will aid anyone."—Mrs. SUEE TEMPLETON, Hooper, Nebraska.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that deal out despair.

returned, laying my hand on her horse's bridle. "I don't fancy such a realistic nightmare in the day-time. Now what's the next move? Across the common, and then home, I suppose?"

The patch of common lying in front of old Wilde's cottage was close before us, and it was necessary to cross it obliquely to get into the High St. On our right the cottage stood, in darkness but for the faint gleam of a fire which flickered on the panes of one of the windows; on our left was Redpots, almost lost in its tangle of disordered garden, and showing no way got abreast of its gates.

"Are both the martyrs to night-bells out, I wonder?"

"Most likely. They're pretty busy, and this is one of Dizarte's days at Market Waxford. Wonder we didn't catch sight of that extraordinary gig of his. I say, look out, Nat—the ground here is awfully rutty!"

Awfully rutty it was, and boggy in places, needing careful riding in the dark. But no care could have averted what happened next. We were halfway across the common, and riding slowly, when suddenly, from a thick clump of tall grass which had concealed him, a miserable brute of a donkey rose up just before the horses. The animal was scared, I suppose, but at any rate he set up a terrific braying. Somehow or other I managed to hold in the gray, who was a quiet animal in general, but Nat's roan was a skittish creature, nervous and mettlesome. She reared, backed, leaped again, and then darted off across the common at her utmost speed, put one of her feet in a hole in the rough ground, and in a moment Nat, sent flying over her head, was lying insensible almost before the door of old Wilde's cottage, while the roan, struggling to her feet again, stood scared and trembling—the wretched beast!
