North Carolina The Negro The Great

Work of the

Soon the work of the Negro grew to gigantic proportions. Now it has become a League-trained worker in the United States. The budget is now $25,000. Kinckle Jones, who to fame or oratory through its field, trained at Harvard and disseminated the Negro problem.

It publishes a "Opportunity," which Charles S. Johnston, investigations and reports of the University of the six Negro Governor Lowden of Chicago Race Commission L. Hollingsworth, an ex-Juaker lawyer, president of the League, Baldwin, son of the agent for Fisk University. On its Board many of the most prominent of the continent.

From October 16 to the Urban League convention at Kansas, es from every part were in attendance. League workers, the representatives of large negro labor, each of the attitude of the regard to the induction into Northern industry.

It might be well here the concerns represented by employers of Negro the experiment was a and that the Negro worker as competent and as different. It was felt, however, much cannot be done safeguarding the Negro possibilities of a business action of a manufacturing Middleton, Ohio, which for the utilization of labor by constructing and encouraging farming and ing, and so on, being rate the sort of thing. ployers should be prepared.

In the steel district according to the executive of the Pittsburgh Urban League, that from ninety to ninety cent of steel mill workers therefore it is reasonable that practically all of the Negroes representing two cent of the working force of that district are already engaged in common labor position will be strengthened. It is considered that there were no Negroes all in 19 of these 23 mills.

In spite of the official of so large a part of the by Negroes as unskilled, is inclined to consider a skilled who quickly learns his movements with erations, so as not to slow
