There is a well-known natural impulse that leads men to the scenes of their great disasters as well as to those of their great crimes. Thus it happened that, after having spent the greater part of the next day in aimlessly wandering about the streets, Felix, towards evening, found himself once more in front of the debris of the theater. Nor did he find himself there alone; for the impulse that had brought him thither had brought many of his companions in misfortune to the same spot. He conversed with several of them, and more than once had occasion to regret on their account—though not, as yet, for a moment on his own—that he had refused the charity that had been offered to him last night. The very few shillings that he had still about him were very soon his own no more; and he began to long for the purse that he had scorned. While talking with one of the most unfortunate of the victims of the fire, and thinking this very thought, he felt a slap upon his shoulder; and on looking around suddenly and rather angrily, saw the easily-remembered form of Barton himself, as fresh from his hearthrug as a child from its cradle.

"Why, man alive!" said the latter, "do you mean to say you've been standing on this very spot ever since yesterday?" There is a well-known natural impulse ing on this very spot ever since yesterday?"

Felix, wholly unversed in English types, and remembering the incident of the purse, not unnaturally took Barton for some eccentric millionaire. It is true that the man was shabby in appearance; but then there is nothing incompatible in general scadings, with millional right. in general seediness with millionairism-rather the other way. If a man is par-ticularly well dressed, it is far more likely that he carries his capital upon his back than when, by carelessness about dress, he implies that he has no about dress, he implies that he has no need to cultivate personal appearance. So he made him a polite answer, and, in the course of a conversation that followed, took occasion to explain to him the case of his companion. In a trice, Barton's hand was in his pocket, which, it will be remembered, contained just ten guineas besides the contents of Mark Warden's purse. In another second it was as empty as when he left Shoe Lare. The unfortunate scene-shifter stared at the gift, as well he might; but, not having the same scruples as but, not having the same scruples as Felix, did not for a moment refuse it. He was about to express his gratitude when Barton interrupted him.

when Barton interrupted him.
"Hang you!" he said, fiercely, "if you say a word I'll pitch you among the bricks! Come," to Felix, "come and drink. That infernal prig, Warden, made me mix my liquors last night. A bad habit, that; it makes one so dry in the morning. What shall it be? The customary small beer? Or what do you favor on such occasions? I myself always take a hair of the dog." So saying he took Felix by the arm and led him to a bar close by to which the fire had brought a considerable increase of custom. rton asked for brandy, and made his companion have some also, whether he would or no. Then he had some more. Then he entered into general con-

"By the daughters of Danaus!" he said to Felix, "cleaned out again! Just lend me half a crown, will you!"

Felix felt in his, also, but he knew beforehand that the search would be vain, so it proved.

"No good, is it? Never mind. Just step outside; and, when you see me come out, do as I do. Tom-another

The barman turned to execute the order; and scarcely had Felix passed the door when Barton dashed out at full speed, calling to him to follow. He did so mechanically, until his new friend, having dodged round several corners, suddenly stopped and broke into a bois-

It was luck for Feltx that he was quick at guessing, for Barton's English was not well suited to unpractised foreign ears. "I know no place," he answered.

"I thought every fiddler got tick as a matter of course—as drunk as a fiddler, you know, all over the world; that's because a fiddler can get his liquor for a tune, and can drink all day long if he likes for nothing. But, as you don't know any place, we must use our wits, that's all. One can't stand here for ever. Talking of standing, a good thought! Let's take to the road."

"To the road?" asked Felix, puzzled. "Yes; cry "Stand and deliver!—gentlemen in distress, you know—ha, ha, hat Claude Duval was your countryman, wasn't he? Any way, Turpin was mine—and a namesake, too ,by the way. Which shall it be—Hounslow or the Scrubbs? Anyhow, we shall be safe, whichever way we go. Cantabit vacuus corant latrone viator."

Certainly if Felix had at first fancied that he had found a millionaire, he was sufficiently undeceived. But his heart also was apt to warm to an empty pocket; it certainly warmed towards one who had shown himself so free-handed when his pocket had been full.

"I am myself without a con-without when his pocket had been full.
"I am myself without a sou—without a penny," he sald, "and I do not know how to get one. And I must leave my lodging; my landlady will need to be paid. But I have yet a piece of bread in the cupboard, and perhaps part of a sausage—"

"Well, you are a good fellow, though you do call yourself a gentleman! I consent. I'll eat half your bread and a quarter of your sausage; for needs must when the devil drives. And then, why, we'll go forth and conquer or die, like brothers in arms. What else have you got besides the bread and sausage?"
"Nothing." sausage Nothing.'

"I don't mean to eat, you know. A watch, for instance?"

"Nor I. Furniture?" "Nor I. Books? No? No, 1, bar my old Horace—but that's to be buried with me. But, man, you must have something. Everybody has something. How many shirts have you?"
Felix stared considerably, and colored also—for his wardrobe was by no means extensive. "How many shirts?" he repeated.

"Yes, how many shirts—more than one, mean? Two?"
"I have two."
"Bene! One more than I have. Good

"Nearly new."
"Then, Optime! My one is not, by any manner of means. What else have you?"

"Not worth a straw."

"A hat—"
"Not worth two straws. Hats never are. Well?"

"A valise—"

"That'll do!"
"And that's all."
"And your violin? Ah I forgot. That fire last night was like Mantua—nimium vicinia Cremonae. All right. One valise, one shirt—that'll do for today, with strict management; and hang tomorrow!
Where do you live?" Where do you live?"

The question was a breach of the etiquette that considerately treats as a sacred mystery the dwelling-place of a man who has confessed himself to be without what is even more necessary than a dwelling-place. But Felix answered the same of the same o swered it.

"Come, then. Let us first consume the bread and sausage. What luxury! to keep two whole shirts all at once. Lead on. I am ready for that bread and sausage. Well, well, such is life-grilled bones and port last night, today a mouthful of sausage and-porter. Positive yesterday, comparative today, perhaps tomorrow superlative—who knows? Anyway, I suppose that at least the comparative goes, as you say in France, comparative goes, as you say in France, song dire?"

"I am afraid it does not, though. I have shown you the limit of my hospitalsome philosophic ass called it, I have a certain dislike that I cannot overcome; or, rather, I have such reverence for it that I would have put it to no such profane use as that of drinking. I shall die, sir, as my grandfather before me."

"And how was that?" [To be Continued.]

THE KING OF WINTER GAMES

Hockey, as Played Today, Scientific and Fast.

United States Clubs Have Not Yes Reached the Canadian Standard of Passing.

"While I have been an admirer of hockey for several years, it must be admitted that the increased interest in this lively game has surprised even the most ardent enthusiasts," writes George E. Stackhouse in Leslie's Week-The University of Pennsylvania already realizes she made a mistake when it was decided not to place a team in the intercollegiate championship race this winter. Pennsylvania was snowed under last year and finished last, which probably accounts for the absence of a Pennsylvania team in the present struggle. I would not be surprised if Cornell as well as Pennsylvania applied for a place in the schedule next winter.

ably the fastest game in the country. Veteran enthusiasts of other sports, who have watched hockey closely during the present winter, will admit that it is a fast, scientific and spirited game, better in every way than its predecessors, shinney and roller polo. The greatest strides made in the game during the last two years have been in team work and in interference. While it is necessary to be a fast skater to be a good hockey player, few of the speed experts ever made good players. To be successful, a man must have endurance as well as speed, must be fearless and able to withstand hard

ASSESSMENT COMMISSION

Recommends Radical Change in System of Taxation.

Abolition of Tax on Personal Property Proposed—Real Property To Be Assessed at Actual Value.

Toronto, Feb. 19 .- The report of the Ontario Assessment Commission was laid on the table this evening by the provincial secretary. The most radical recommendation of the commission is the abolition of the personal property tax and the substitution of a business tax, a tax on professions and callings and a house tax. The following are the conclusions of the comission: 1. That real property be assessed at its actual value, including mineral lands, and the real property of all corporations. That the right of use by any person of highways or other public places, in addition to the structures thereon, be assessed at actual value.

2. That the assessment and taxation of personal property other than income be abolished.

3. That in lieu of the tax on per-Second race, selling, I mile and 70 3. That in lieu of the tax on per-yards—Meme. Wastell, 92 (Boyd), 9 to sonal property the following method

(a) Tax all persons (with some exceptions in the case of certain corporations) with reference to their inome (subject to a suitable exemption), in most cases indirectly, but in some cases directly upon income.

Where a person's income is derived from trade, manufacture or financial or commercial business (private bankers and brokers excepted), in cities towns and villages, tax the person by reference to the rental value of the premises occupied for the purpose of his business, instead of directly upon income. (c) In the case of persons following other callings (including private bankers and brokers) exempt income up to where income is more than $1,000, but not more than $4,000, tax the person by reference to the rental value of the premises occupied for the purpose of his business or occupation, instead of directly upon income. (d) Where the income of such a person is more than $4,000, tax him by reference to the rental value of the premises occupied for the purpose of his business or ocupation, in lieu of assessing his income up to $4,000, and tax him directly upon any additional income above $4,000.

(e) In the case of persons having income derived from investments and the like and not from their business or calling, tax them directly upon such income (subject to exceptions). 4. Impose in cities, towns and villages, as a supplementary tax, a tax on all owners and occupiers of houses (meaning by that term buildings used as dwelling places) by assessing them for the rental value of the house, sub-

EARLY MARRIAGE OF TWO SCHOOLMATES

Bridegroom 17 and Bride 14-Bride's Mother Aids the Young Couple.

Binghamton, N. Y., Feb. 20. - An elopement, in which the bride's mother figured as the promoter, and which united in marriage Albert Stratton, 17 years of age, and Etta Walker, 14 years, is causing a sensation here.

The parents of the boy are wealthy people, and he has been attending school. One of his schoolmates was Etta Walker, to whom he paid the usual attention a schoolboy tenders his best girl. Nothing was thought of the matter until Stratton suggested to his father that he might some day get married. Then he was told that his attentions to the Walker girl must case at once. The couple decided to get married, irrespective of the wishes of the groom's parents.

The girl thought an elopement would be romantic, and with young Stratton, accompanied by Mrs. Walker, the trio went to the residence of Rev. John MacLachlan, a leading Presbyterian minister of this city, who married them. Mrs. Walker says she did not attempt to conceal their ages, but gave the true dates. The school authorities declare that the bride, being under 16, must attend school under the compulsory education law, until she reaches

The Danger of Low Vitality

Severe Colds, Pneumonia, Consumption, Find Easy Victims in Persons Whose Health is in Poor Condition - Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

At no season of the year is a low condition of health more likely to lead to serious results than at the present time. With vitality running low, the blood thin and nerves exhausted, one is made susceptible to colds and catarrhs on the slightest exposure. Gradually a persistent cough, hawking and spitting, is established, and severe cold is accompanied by chills, fevers, pains in the chest, and sometimes spitting of blood.

This is the short and deadly road that leads to pneumonia, consumption and other deadly lung troubles, and the only sure method of avoiding them is to keep the general health just as near to the high-water mark as pos sible all the time. It is because of its remarkable influence as a systembuilder that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has come to be so universally used as a means of increasing vitality and raising the standard of health. There is no lesson which experience more strongly emphasizes than the importance of keeping the body plied with health-giving vitality. When a weakened, run-down system is attacked by pneumonia. consumption, or even a heavy cold, there is small chance of ever shaking it off. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food instills into the blood the most potent blood-forming and nerve-invigorating elements which have ever been found in nature. You cannot possibly help but be benefited by this preparation, and even in longstanding cases of extreme debility and prostration there is good hope for great food cure. It is not wise to neglect the health at any time. Do not wait until you are completely exhausted and worn out before appealing to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Build up the system while yet there is some foundation to build on. Put new, rich blood in the shriveled arteries, new vital energy into the nerves, and add firm flesh and solid muscles to the body, in order that in the day of trial, when attacked by disease, there may be some chance for fighting the great foe to human recovery by the persistent use of this happiness. Should you find yourself suffering from a cough, bronchitis, asthma, or any similar trouble, we can recom-mend you to use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, believing it to be the most thoroughly effective treatment that you can possibly ob-tain. It has time and again proven its power over asthma, and affords the greatest relief, even in the most serious cases of pneumonia and consump-

While Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is aiding expectoration, clearing the choked-up air passages, and healing and soothing torn and ulcerated linings of the throat and bronchial tubes, do not lose sight of the value of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of restoring lost strength and vigor. It is a unique preparation of surprising effect as a blood and nerve restorative. Fifty cents a box, six boxes for $2.50. At all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates &
