Yesterday a notorious character na William Garvin stole an axe from Mr. W. P. Howland. He was seen in the act by one of the servants, who followed him and one of the servants, who followed him and reported the occurrence at No. 2 station. Garvin sold the axe to a woman on Chest-nut street, and then went to the house of Bob Berry on Albert street where he was arrested by Constable Stormont. After being placed in the cells he developed all the symptoms of delirium tremers. He said he "saw things," and evidently suffered intense agony both mentally and physi-cally.
