

PIEL PIER, NEAR BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

a door six feet high. Of course all communication with the surrounding country was suspended.

Mr. Ashwell remarks, "I've often seen three horses in a row pulling at a waggon over the moss till they have sank up to their middle, and had to be drawn out one at a time by their necks to save their lives." And another Midland engineer subsequently remarked that he had watched four horses dragging one telegraph pole over the boggy ground, and the exertion was so great that one of the horses tore a hoof off.

SALTAIRE.