

yet to it was brought, by the debaters, much that was new and worthy of consideration.

The contest was decided in favor of the negative, and as a result the action of the General Assembly is sustained unsullied for another year.

Mr. D. MacVicar, B.A., acted as critic on the occasion, whose word of commendation and reproof was sufficient to exclude anything of a like nature here. During the intervals of the programme, music was discoursed by the College Glee Club, in the persons of Mr. Reid, Mr. Mahaffy and Mr. Anderson.

The Society held another meeting on Monday evening, Nov. 10th. Owing to the Missionary Alliance being in session, it was deemed wise to postpone the regular meeting which should have taken place on Friday evening. Although the first of the week, when students are supposed to be most busily engaged, still the attendance was none the less large. To meet the exigencies of the hour, the programme was confined to the debate merely.

The discussion in this instance centred round the resolution that "Party government is detrimental to the interests of a country." Messrs. McKenzie and Graham supported the affirmative; opposed to them were Mr. Gordon and Mr. R. McDougall, B.A. The question was ably discussed on both sides, but with a sufficient clearness on the part of the affirmative to warrant a decision in their favour.

After the necessary process of rejection and readjustment by the critic, the Society adjourned to meet on the twenty-first of the month. If the success of these meetings be any criterion, the Philosophical and Literary Society has a hopeful outlook for the winter.
