

POSTSCRIPT.

SINCE the above was written and committed to press, a publication has appeared, said to be sanctioned by the American government, entitled "An Exposition of the Causes and Character of the late War with Great Britain." This work is entirely political, and does not therefore come immediately under our consideration; but as the spirit in which it is written is so congenial to what we have often had occasion to allude to as truly American, and as it must clearly evince to the British dominions the inveterate animosity of the American government to this country, we deem it necessary to make a few observations upon it.

This extraordinary production views every movement of the British government with an averted look and a jaundiced eye, and distorts every event which it narrates.

The authors are not satisfied with adorning America with every amiable virtue which can adorn a nation, such as good faith, the purest and most honourable intentions, patience under the most unprovoked and accumulated aggressions, a sincere respect for the rights of all nations, a
