

41¹ Bone-marrow in a Child.

The specimen shows a small sternum sawn longitudinally. The marrow tissue is divided off by three cartilage septa, two of which are very broad. The shell of compact bone is rather thick. The marrow tissue is very red and the supporting bone trabeculae very firm but not visible.

R. R., female, aged 9, admitted March 13th, died April 9th. A case of endocarditis following recurrent attacks of acute rheumatic fever. Died from failure of compensation.

P.M. Pericarditis, adherent pericardium, recurrent granular endocarditis, mitral stenosis, nplasic aorta, multiple infarets of lungs, lobar pneumonia, fibrinous pleurisy, advanced fatty nutmeg liver, purpura, anasarea.

Ref. : E. 5501. R.V.H. 40.13.

PRESENTED by Dr. Grmer.