

In 1847, after much opposition, a charter was obtained for the Telos Dam, and the toll now allowed for passage through it is twenty cents per thousand feet.

For much of the information contained in the foregoing, the writer is indebted to Calvin Dwinel, Esq., who is a brother of the late Rufus Dwinel, and who was personally on the scene, and participated in the events described.