and talk clothing styles one of them usually has a preference in the store he likes best to trade in and where his tastes have been given every consideration. We have an extensive young men's trade, grewing larger each year by reason of our efforts to place before the nifty young dresser the proper fabrics, styles and colors. We touch the pocketbook as lightly as good clothes properly tailored can be sold for and meet our legitimate expenses.

We most cordially invite young men generally to accept our standing invitation and
