GEORGE, DUKE OF CORNWALL

Intended for the Navy until the Death of His Elder Brother, Clarence.

HAS SEEN MUCH OF THE WORLD

Something of the Man Who Will Succeed Edward VII on the Throne.

His Royal Highness George, Duke of Cornwall and York, had always been intended for the Admiralty until the death of his elder brother, who was heir-apparent to the throne of England. Prince George entered the navy as young as it is possible for any boy to do, for when he was barely twelve years old. For nearly twenty years he applied himself industriously to his profession, and was as fit a sailor as any man in the matter. He was a step in the step of his promotion. From the first day he went to sea his position by birth has been, and even is for the time that he is about, completely ignored.

As midshipman, sub-lieutenant, lieutenant, or commander, he executed the duties that fell to his lot, with simple seal and straightforwardness. It was always abundantly clear that his heart was in the work; he loved the navy, and what he did is done with thoroughness.

His sea-going life has by no means restricted or narrowed the horizon of his outlook upon the world. He has visited every one of the British colonies; he has seen the face to face and conversed with some of their leading statesmen. More than once he has journeyed through the length and breadth of Canada. In Europe, Asia and Africa he has traveled much.

By quiet observation of character under every varying influence, the Duke of Cornwall and York has laid up stores of invaluable experience. By reason of his training, as well as by natural inclination and disposition, his powers of observation and of memory are strong and well disciplined. He not only hears and listens, but also reads and thinks for himself. Possessed naturally of business-like aptitudes, he displays in the management of his affairs a steady concentration of effort and a quick appreciation of the question submitted to him in all its several bearings.

His personal tastes are exceedingly simple, without tendency to extravagance; to others he is, ever, when the case demands, open-handed, warm-hearted and generous. Like most of his family, his memory is singularly receptive and retentive. He never forgets a friend, or the face and name of one with whom he has been brought into contact.

Why Duke of York?
A curious story, illustrative of Prince George's persistency of purpose, is related in connection with his title of Duke of York. He and his elder brother, the late Duke of Clarence, were in their youth both very fond of the study of English history, and more especially of the dramatic period covered by the Wars of the Roses. As the elder might in due course expect to succeed to the throne of England, the younger determined that if ever he had to choose a dukedom it should be that of York. When in 1892 the time eventually came for the choice, the many other titular combinations were suggested and pressed upon him, Prince George steadily and successfully adhered to his old boy's resolve.

REFUSED TO ANSWER QUESTIONS

Police Well Guarded the Prisoner From the Public Who Surged Around Him.

Buffalo, Sept. 16.—Leon P. Colzigosz, alias Fred Niemann, was indicted this afternoon by the County Court grand jury for the crime of murder in the first degree, in fatally shooting President William McKinley at the Temple of Music, in the Pan-American Exposition Grounds, at 4:30 o'clock, on the afternoon of Sept. 6.

When arraigned before Judge Edward K. Emery in the County Court at 5:30 o'clock the prisoner stubbornly refused to answer questions repeatedly asked of him by District Attorney Penney as to whether he had counsel or wanted counsel. The District Attorney then suggested that, inasmuch as the defendant refused to answer, counsel should be assigned. Judge Emery assigned Hon. Loren L. Lewis and Hon. Robert Stans, former Supreme Court Justices, of this city, whose names had been suggested by the Erie County bar.

Colzigosz will probably be arraigned again tomorrow morning to plead to the indictment. Judge Emery directed the officers to notify the attorneys and remove the prisoner.

Colzigosz was handcuffed to the detectives, who started out of the court room with him. The crowds surged after them, but found the exit barred by four strong policemen. Outside the court room door the prisoner was surrounded by 12 policemen with clubs drawn, and under command of Captain Michael Hogan, salaried George N. Mitchell and several deputy sheriffs. The prisoner was hurried downstairs and into the basement, whence he was taken through the tunnel to the jail, across Delaware-avenue. Whether he was left there for the night or taken elsewhere, the police refused to say.

District Attorney Penney stated as he left the court room that Justice Lewis and Stans would be notified and given an opportunity to talk with the prisoner, and that he hoped to arrange Colzigosz to come morning to take his plea to the indictment. The district attorney will also notice the trial of the prisoner for next Monday morning at 10 o'clock in Part III of the Supreme Court, that being the opening day of the September term.

NEW KING'S SON ROYALLY RECEIVED AT QUEBEC

AMID SCENES OF VAULT AND SPLENDOR

Freedom of Ancient Capital Tendered, Degree Conferred by Laval University, Numerous Addresses Presented Dined at the Citadel, and Treated to an Elaborate Spectacle of Illumination at Night—Popular Demonstration of Patriotism.

Quebec, Sept. 16.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York have landed here and have met with a reception that left nothing to be desired. The rain yesterday passed away and the royal visitors met with a typical Canadian fall day. A fresh breeze from the northwest made the temperature pleasant while the warm sun lit up the ancient city and its beautiful surroundings and made the whole place gleam with brightness. A heavy squall in the afternoon did some harm to the decorations, but it was soon over.

Their Royal Highnesses met, too, with a typical Canadian welcome, whose heartiness and cordiality could not be doubted. It was not the flag by day and the lights by night alone that proved how glad the people were to see their future King and his wife. It was the cheers and applause that greeted them all along the line of march and the spontaneity of the pious-ness which everyone evinced. The children might sing in chorus, the guards might march and the bands might play the National Anthem, but still significant was the readiness of the crowds to cheer, and their loyal attitude, which no one commanded and no one could enforce.

It was, moreover, a crowd of the most varied and representative character. Merchants from Montreal rubbed shoulders with the habitant of the country districts, the factory worker of St. Roch's stood beside the well-known faces from the townships, and the West was met at every turn. It was a truly national welcome given to the Prince who will one day be the honored monarch of the Great Dominion of Canada.

It was well past 9:30 before the Ophir barge could get away from the shore, and her escort were seen slowly turning and pointing to the shore. Already the Dufferin terrace was lined with people standing three or four deep along the railing or glombling on the chairs and the glads, the grand battery and every other point of vantage were occupied by throngs of eager spectators.

Beautiful Sight.
They had a beautiful sight to watch. The day was not yet perfectly clear. The clouds threw large shadows across the mighty river. Away over the Levee a light came slowly up the river, her white sides stood out sharp and distinct against the dark banks of the Island of Orleans.

On the north shore a fleet of nearly a dozen boats had put out to meet her. As they fell into line behind the squadron as it turned Point Levis.

THE ETERNAL CITY

ONE CENT

Character Sketch of Her Who Will Some Day Be Queen of the Realm.

TRULY ENGLISH IS THE DUCHESS

Kind, Active and Intelligent, She is Immensely Popular With All Her People.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Through a living line of bareheaded people stretching from Buffalo up thru the Alleghenies down on the broad valley of the Susquehanna and on to the Marble City on the banks of the shining Potomac, the nation's martyred President to-day made his last journey to the seat of the government, over which he presided for four and one-half years. The whole country seemed to have drained its population at the sides of the track over which the funeral train passed. The thin lines thru the mountains and the sparsely settled districts thickened at the little hamlets, covered across in towns suddenly grown to the proportions of respectable cities, and were congested into multitudes in the larger cities. Work was suspended in field and mine and the schools were dismissed, and everywhere appeared the trappings and tokens of woe. A million flags at half mast dotted hillside and valley, and formed a blizzard of color over the cities. And from almost every banner streamed a bit of crepe. The stations were heavy with the black symbols of mourning. At all the larger towns and cities, after the train got into Pennsylvania, militia men drawn up at "present arms" kept back the enormous crowds.

Viewed in Silence.
The silence with which the countless thousands viewed the remains of their hero and martyr was oppressive and profound. Only the rumbling of the train wheels, the sobbings from far and near, the tolling of the church and other bells broken on the ear. At several places, Williamsport, Harrisburg and Baltimore, the crowds played Cardinal Newman's grand hymn.

Body at the White House.
The remains of President McKinley to-day were taken to the White House. The train left Buffalo at 8:30 this morning and arrived at Washington at 8:38 to-night. It is estimated that more than a million people saw the coffin which held all that was mortal of President McKinley.

Notice to Ladies.
It will not be long now before cold days are upon us. This is a word of warning to ladies who desire to have their garments cleaned, repaired, dyed or altered, or who wish to have their dresses made, before the weather becomes so disagreeable and expeditions are prevented at a later date. The Dineen Company are prepared to handle your garment to-day and have it turned out at once. Their work is done in Ontario and most satisfactory and expeditions are prevented at a later date.
