

means of keeping the flame of devotion burning brightly in the soul, to which we would like to earnestly call your attention. We would, if possible, invest the exercises of the closet, and of family religion, with greater importance to our own apprehension and yours than they have ever had before. We would plead with all possible earnestness for a more regular and conscientious attendance upon the prayer-meeting and the class-meeting. We cannot reasonably expect the prosperity which we all so earnestly desire if these things be neglected. We would like, too, to impress you with the thought, that this prosperity cannot possibly be brought about through the exertion of any one order or class, but by the combined exertion of all who love the Lord Jesus Christ. We would plead for unity of action as well as unity of spirit, among ministers and people, in our efforts to subjugate the world to the dominion of Christ. But we believe all these things to be included in what has been said already. If we will but be BIBLE CHRISTIANS in the sense which we have endeavoured to indicate, none of these things, we are persuaded, will be neglected; we would not therefore say one word which would by any possibility divert your attention from what we verily believe to be so fundamental to all that concerns your personal spiritual well-being and the prosperity of the Church. "And now, brethren, we commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you inheritance among all them that are sanctified."
