LATE SPORT NEWS

Boston, Jan. 31.—Ed (Strangler) Lewis the wrestling champion, whose use of the headlock has caused injury to opponents and criticism from spectators, will come to grips here tonight with Renato Gardini, without the aid of this formidable hold. At the request of the promoters, made after reports of the maiming of Joe Stecher and the temporary unconsciousness of others who opposed Lewis, the champion agreed to wrestle without the hold. Whether he intends to abandon this hold entirely, is doubtful, however, as Lewis insists that it has been sanctioned for years, and that he has himself been a victim of it and that he gained mastery of it only after years of application.
