Development Of Resources Is Essential

Sir John Willison Tells How Canada Must Meet the Problems of Reconstruction
The next six months will be the most serious in Canada's problem of reconstruction but by the same spirit of organization, co-operation and production that enabled her to take her part so nobly in the world war she will come through those six months and the years which follow afterwards. Such was the opinion of Sir John Willison, chairman of the Canadian reconstruction committee, expressed in speaking before the Canadian Club at Bond's last night. He thought that the situation demanded a most harmonious relation between labor and capital, a retaining within the country of her raw products and the development of industries from them. National research along industrial lines and the standardization and sub-division of industries he said to be absolute necessities.
Sir John Willison prefaced his address by saying that in Canada the east and the west knew too little of each other, but the same national spirit actuated them both. He went on to sum up the situation of the dominion at the present time, showing how the war workers, soldiers and their dependents would soon place about one and a half million of new workers in the dominion, while the national debt had increased enormously, the export trade had increased over 1,000 per cent in two years, and the imports had fallen off most appreciably. The situation sounded alarming and demanded immediate co-operation of government and municipalities and development of national undertakings, and waterworks, reclaiming of lands, improvement of railways, and highways and an improved housing campaign. The housing problem would be serious indeed when the soldiers returned and they must not have difficulties put in their way. For soldiers who had lost conception with their old trades he said emphatically that government assistance must be found. There was no need of public works in the spirit of charity as there was plenty of work of actual necessity to be done. The industrial policy must be supported by the national necessity and if the exports of the dominion could be kept at between four hundred and five hundred million dollars as compared with the six hundred and thirty-five million dollars of the last year the balance of industry and agriculture could be maintained.

Middle Aged Women
Are Here Told the Best Remedy for Their Troubles.
Fresmont, O.—'I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger every day since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared.'—Mrs. M. GODDARD, 925 Napoleon St., Fresmont, Ohio.
North Haven, Conn.—'Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health after overworking else had failed when passing through change of life. There is nothing like it to overcome the trying symptoms.'—Mrs. FLORENCE ISILLA, Box 197, North Haven, Conn.

Need of Industrial Research.
Of the need of heavy government expenditure for the benefit of industrial research he spoke very strongly and advocated special post graduate courses in research along industrial lines. The Atlantic fisheries, he said, could be raised in value from forty-six million dollars annually to one hundred million dollars if proper scientific methods were used. Here, too, the United States had proved the success of what he advocated and large industrial firms were themselves contributing a great proportion of their profits for research work. Germany, he said, had waited twenty-five years to begin the war, would then have been without a blow the commercial mistress of the world through successful scientific methods. The dominion and the provincial governments had not stinted agricultural research and industrial research would be equally profitable. Regarding the relations of employers and employees, he said that the spirit of collaboration and good-fellowship was worth all the conciliation machinery invented. Continuity of employment and payment according to production with a high standard of efficiency, he described, as being the best basis for industrial success.
At the close of his address, which had been listened to with very keen interest, Sir John Willison referred to the value of the Atlantic ports to the industrial centres in the west and said the realization of that value had been brought home to all by the rapid movement of troops overseas.
Judge H. O. McInerney, who presided, had in his introduction of the distinguished guest referred to the fact that he had spoken before the club in 1907 on the subject of forty years of prosperity under confederation and said that the club was all the more desirous for this reason of listening to him again. The hearty thanks of the club were extended to Sir John Willison by the president.
HOTEL GUESTS STARTLED.
There was an alarm from box 23 about 2 o'clock this morning for a signal blaze in the cellar under the store occupied by the Singer Manufacturing Co., in Germain street. The blaze started in a pile of rubbish and, though it was soon extinguished, the smoke penetrated the store above as well as the adjoining store occupied by Hoyt Bros., causing some smoke damage. The Royal Hotel extends over these two stores and the guests overhead made ready for a quick exit in case the fire got beyond control but fortunately the blaze was soon extinguished.
