And not one sorrowful word would Aida speak until her Aunt was refreshed and rested. Then with many tears, they spoke of the dead Frank Elton, who was Aida's father's brother, while Mrs. May Wharton was her mother's sister, and now to be her own protectress and comforter. But after there had been a long confidential intercourse, Mrs. Wharton asked :-

Where is Leon Hartsberg?"

But just before he died he made a memorandum, a sort of will and gave it to me. He made me promise to keep it, to show it to no one, unless within one year Elton Graham returns here. If he does, I am to return to him the fortune he rejected when he left here in anger, six years ago."

"And you—what will you have then?"

"Nothing! Unless"—and Aida blushed—"I marry Elton. You know

"You knew or this blushed—"I marry Elton. You know that is impossible; so if Elton returns, Leon will have a portionless bride."

"Your Uncle Frank told me years ago that you were bethrothed to Elton Elton. "But Mr. Wilson told me when he went away."

"Years ago, Auntie May, and I am not twenty-two! It was because Elton refused to agree to this farce of betrothal and wanted to marry some one else that the quarrel arose with Uncle Frank When I, too, exercised my own right of choice, Uncle Frank tried to recall Elton, but all his advertisements were in vain. I have told Mr. Wilson, the lawyer who had charge of all my business to try again to find my cousin."

"And until he comes, you are a prisoner at Eitonglade?"

"Only for one year. If he does not come before the fifteenth of next June I am free, and heiress of Eltonglade."

"It was an odd whim! I think, my was a round whim! I think, my was a round whim! I think, my was a round with the comes, and heiress of Eltonglade."

"Your cousin has gone to the library," he said, "and will return here. Little one, did I do wrong to hasten our journey!"

"We Leon and Aunt May," said Aida.
"I will get you the letter."

She left the room hastily. Now that the dreaded moment had come, ahe realized bitterly how the loss would torture her. To leave Eltonglade, to follow Leon to Brazil, perhaps to die there as Elton's wife had done. This was the future before, her, instead of the ease and happiness of the past year, the power to let Leon choose what occupation he would.

It seemed some moments of struggle foot Aida to summon sufficient self-control to return to the drawing-room, but when she did Leon was alone.

"Your cousin has gone to the library," he asid, "and will return here. Little one, did I do wrong to hasten our journey!" "Years ago, Auntie May, and I am

"It was an odd whim? I think, my dear, your uncle's coentricities verge on—" and the lady tapped her forehead significantly. "But it is very latepast one, o'clock. Good-night, darling! I am more than glad to be with you again."

The days passed quietly during the months that followed. Aida packed away the wedding garments her uncle's sudden illness and death had rendered useless for the time, and the lettera to and from Pernambuco became the one excitement of her very quiet life. But although outwardly she was the gentle little maiden Leon loved, there was in her heart steadily and sure growing an ever-increasing dread of Elton Graham's return. Power was fomething new and pleasant in her life, and it was very delightful to be mistress of this handsome estate and large income, to spend as she would direct and govern uncontroled. And above all, to know that she could give Leon wealth—to remain in his own country if he wished. He was not pleased with his erile, aithough his business looked prosperous. He dialiked the climate, the customs, and he was impatient for the year to end that was to decide his future course. The hope of living on Aida's money never crossed his mind, but he knew if she was impatient for the year to end that was to decide his future course. The hope of living on Aida's money never crossed his mind, but he knew if she was impatient for the year to end that was to decide his future course. The hope of living on Aida's money never crossed his mind, but he knew if she was wealthy he could find avenues for his own energies nearer home than this strange Brazilian city.

JAMES NEILSON. TO THE Patronize Home FARMERS OF MIRAMICHI. We have been Manufacturing IRON FRAME MOWERS

combining greater excellence of mechanical simplicity together with greater durability and entire reliability for all the requirements of the field, than any other Mower extant.—In construction they are similar to the celebrated Walter A. Wood's Iron Frame Mower, and the Richardson Buckeye, both American Machines. Of the former there are over 200,000 in use, and the extraordinary number of 20,000 were manufacture and sold last season, by the Wood Company of United States. We have over 500 of our manufacture now in use, every one of which (no exceptions) stands as a monument of the grand and unprecedented success of home manufacture and our enterprise. A list of our Agents in this section of the Province will be found appended, and farmers are requested to ask information of them relative to our Mowers in use in their respective localities, which will establish beyond doubt their unquestionable superiority over any other mower to be had in our market. The facility of procuring all parts or pieces within a nominal length of time must show beyond the shadow of a doubt the claims such an enterprise has upon the farmers of the Maritime Provinces.

For the coming harvest of 1877 we will manufacture LARGLY in excess of our numbers of last season, and trust that our growing enterprise may find such inducements held out to it as will be commensurate with its merits.

Let it be remembered we have no hesitation at adding a line provided the support of the State BEST MOWER, Plane and Match Lumber, and Plane
