You are languid, and never by any chance do you betray astonishment. You regard any display of emotion as bad form. w, bad form is a very good term, and it strikes me that most of you are in bad form, physically, at least. The other day, one of your number—about as muscular a specimen as you possess, too—accompanied me on a walk; not a very long walk, either, twelve miles—six miles, a rest, lunch and return. Lovely day; not too warm. For three miles out our friend did pretty well: on the fourth mile he only looked warm, and did not complain; fifth, said, "Awful-

Tired! I was enjoying myself. The arr was exhilirating and my blood flowed joyously. The homeward journey, pleasant enough for me in the fragrant summer twilight was a positive agony to our friend, apparently, and wherefore? Late hours, no exercise to speak of, too much whiskey, beer and smoking. How many of you observe even the simplest laws of hygiene? Few. You go to bed at all hours and many of you suffer from insomnia. No wonder. Pipes, cigars, cigarettes, any manner of smoking indulged in to excess plays the very deuce with your nerves. Then you drink—how much you only know yourselves—but too much I assure you. When, as you know well, you need corpse revivers in the mornings in the shape of B. and S's cocktails, or the artfully prepared concoction you get at a certain drug store, you must know you are overdoing the matter. If some of the time spent at cards and billiards was spent in a well ventilated gymnasium or in open air exercise, not dawdling up and down King street, but walking many miles out a country road, or in cricket, rowing or tennis, you would find an improvement in the steadiness of your nerves.

He had read in one of the sensational Was he to do it?

He had read in one of the sensational novels of the day that it was right and proper to make his intentions known to the parent of his beloved and after one week of thoughtful preparation he devoted Sunday to the composition of an epistle which two days later threw another household into great excitement.

The letter was read to the stern parent to the title; but by outsiders generally—and especially by those not enamored of "aristocratic" tendencies—the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters domiciled in Fredericton, who seem disposed to supplement this natural feeling of dislike by acts of the most apprecially by those not enamored of "aristocratic" tendencies—the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters are the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters are the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters are the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters are the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters are the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters are the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters are the feeling will doubtless be attributed to the natural repurance of hard-working citizens of all clusters are the feeling will are the Boston, Oct. 15, 1888.—I was in Yarmouth, N. S., a few weeks ago, reveling in one of those luxurious vacations that all newspaper men enjoy every two or three months, and fate, or recessity, I don't remember which, led me into one of the local barber shops. I say, one of them, for if my memory serves me aright, there is at least one other in that somewhat ambitious town. One of the customera, who was waiting for his chance to be scalped, adroit ly brought the conversation around to the subject of Boston—all conversations usually drift in that direction in the land of the Bluenose—and incidentally propounded the reflective query whether Yarmouth would ever be as big as the City of Beans.

To this the knight of the razor, with all all the originality and importance that usually characterizes a Yarmouth man, loftily replied:

"Pshaw! Why Yarmouth is as big as Boston in his valies, the provincialists as a body, are determined that the country shall never become corrupt while they can do anything to prevent it. All of which is highly commendable, and is respectfully submitted to the country at large.

I never was so sorry for anything as I was for the fact that I missed that Faneuil Hall disturbance. A riot has a strange facination for the average mortal, even if he is morally certain that he will furnish an item for the newspapers by coming in contact with it, and I am no exception to the rule. But I was enjoying another kind of a riot in that dizzily-revolving city of Halifax just at that juncture and so lost an elegant chance of being jumped on by an Eighth Ward hod-carrier, or used as a patent cobble-stone cleaner by an infuriated member of the O'Shaughnessy Dimmicratic Battalion.
