Madme Eames is also of this opinion. but she recently, in London, put the matter in a new light to those who invited her to appear gratuitously.

Madame Eames was one afternoon at Lord Charles Beresiord's and the next day received a letter from Lady Berestord saying that two ladies present had wanted to ask a favor, but in her presence had lost

- But I am not afraid of you,' wrote Lady Berestord, and proceeded to say that the ladies in question, who Lappened to be extremely wealthy, wished her to sing for nothing for a certain charity.

Madame Eames immediately and wrote a reply. It was her duty, she said, to save herself as much as possible for her operatic performances at Covent G arden, which were stipulated by contract to be two days apart so that she might give her freshest and best to the public. She felt, however, greatly attracted toward the charity named, and would make only one condition regarding the donating of her services. She had received 300 guineas (about $1500) for singing at W.W Astor's and about the same amount at other private concerts. She would gladly sirg for nothing at the charity concert if each one of the lagies interested, who had so kindly asked her, would donate 300 guineas to the object for which the concert was to be

As yet no replies from 'the ladies interested' have been received. But Lady Beresford, not being one of the interested ladies,' appreciates more fally the humor of the situation.

MR. CLARK ON THE ANXIOUS SEAT. Hardly any one ever hears the name of Representative 'Champ' Clark, of Missouri without wondering where he got it. Like the other good things of this world Mr. Clark possesses, he gave it to himself. His permets christened him James Beauchamp Clark but Clark was a common surname in his part of the country, and James even commoner; so, as he cherished dreams of f glory, he knocked off the James Beau and became Champ Clark-easy to pronounce, easy to remember, and distinctive in sound. He was admitted to the bar as Champ, married as Champ, and elected as Champ. But every little wh 'e some body who remembers him in early life, and is careful of the properties, resuscitates the Beauchamp or James Beauchamp, and then the air turns blue.

Few members of the House have earned their bread in so many ways as Clark before coming there. He has worked as a hired farm hand, clerk in a crossroads store, editor of a country newspaper, president of a college and attorney at law. His fame as an orator preceded him to Washington, and a pretty fair specimen of it is his tribute to Mr. Thomas B Reed, whom he admired 'merchant prince' of the West. It is posite side of the House. 'Ne company f soldiers in the regular army,' said Mr. Clark, 'was ever more thoroughly drilled then the Republican contingent under his g. ... When he said, 'Thumbs up!, it's thumbs up; when he says, 'Thumbs down!' it's thumbs down. He can't teach them to conquer, for that is impossible to any man; but he does teach them to harass and bedevil us Democrats almost into apop-

Mr. Clark has a right to speak for the Border States. He was born in Kentucky spent a part of his younger manhood in West Virginia, and settled down for life in Missouri. He was only eleven years old when the Civil War broke out, so he could take no part in it himself; but he has lived so much among the veterans of both at mies and on the edge of battlefields, that his mind is full of what we might call the domestic history of the struggle. He hardly ever makes a speech without drawing some picturesque illustratiou from the war era of a generation ago.

Because he has not hesitated to criticise members of his own party when he disapproved of them, Mr. Clarke has sometimes had his Democratic orthodoxy questioned. But he laughs at such talk, and says that it would be about as hard to shake him out of his party as it was for some serious-minded ders to shake him out of chu rch. When he was a young man he was a famous dancer but after joining the church he was warned that he must give up this amusement. One evening he was tempted beyond his Many think that musical artists should strength, and surrendered himself to the delights of the ur, joining in every danc on the list, and taking out as a partner every pretty girl within reach. The church brethren were scandalized and summoned I'm before them.

Atter a long and solemn council the brethren decided that his name must be stricken from the roll of the church. Clark went away and took a place in the hindmost pew for the services of that day. His conduct there was most exemplary. He joined loudly in all the hymns; shouted his 'amens' at the proper junctures in the other exercises; and when the preacher invited to the front those sinners who wished to join the church, up he marched and took the best place on the 'anxious seat.'

The brethren who had expelled him as hour before exchanged glances of con sternation; but what could they do There was nothing left but to admit him once more to membership, and let him try

Mr. Sousa, the March King, wears his un form at all times and seasons. He com pels his men to do likewise. The fact that he does so leads to experiences that are very laughable to him.

the blue uniform.

'I don't know,' answered Mr. Sonsa. 'Well, don't you know anything ?' said the man. ' If I knew any one here I would report you.'

At which Mr. Sousa shouted with laughter, and the man, catching sight of the genuine elevator boy, saw he had somehow made a mistake.

Agrin, Mr. Sousa was standing in a rail way station, on the platform, waiting for a train. A belatad traveler ran up to him and shouted: . Has the 9:03 frain pulled

'I really don't know,' answered the man with the blue uniterm. 'Well, why don't you know?' shouted the irate traveler. 'What ars you standing here for like a log of wood ? Aren't vou a conducter P'

'Yes,' said Mr. Sousa, 'I am a condr stor.

'A nice sort of conductor you are exclaimed the traveler. 'Well, you see,, said Mr. Sousa, 'I am the conductor of a brass band.'

An Unrecognized Genius.

The announcement that Mr. Marshel Field will provide a large sum for building on the Lake Front of Chicago, as an adeq vate and permanent home for the museum which bears his name, calls renewed atnever experienced anything but fattering recognition of his business genius, but according to a story which is related by some of the older citizens of Pitsfield, Massachusetts, there was one occasion on which the commercial gifts of the merchant king failed to make themselves apparent. When Marshall Field was in his trons chant of the boy, and took him to Pittsfield where he was placed in the store of a family friend. The father returned to Conway, and several months passed before he again visited Pittsfield to learn what progress his son was making. The keeper of the store received the father of his apprentice very cordially, but hesitated for a moment when he was asked 'How's the boy coming on P'

'Hate to say it,' was the reply, but I guess you might as well take him back with you. The fact is, I don't think he's cut out for a merchant !'

This anecdote is one of the chief traditions of Pittsfield, and is related with great relish by the men whose recollections cover the period of Mr Field's boyhood appren-

Mr. Field is a plain, reticent man, with out pretensions to any fads or special lines of philanthropic interest, and finds his chief recreation in the game of great affairs.

The horrors of the advertising maniare thus amusingly set forth by Mary Cholmondeley in the Monthly Review:

I hear that the white cliffs of Albion are no longer to be left out in the cold as 'spaces to let.' Possibly before these lines find their way into print that landmark o English eyes and hearts will be transform ed into a belt of advertisements which, I understand, will at night be writ in fire.

In the next war which the arrogance o other nations forces upon us we can imagine co the hospital ships near our shore, how the sorely wounded soldier will say to the comrade who support

'I'm goin' fast, Bill. Is 'Lemco' in eight yet ?'

'No, old chap, it ain't.' ·Have we passed Labby's Lip Salve ?'

While on the bridge the burly captain preps into the night and says:

'Dash my starry topsails it we aren't out

'No sir,' says the attendant boatswain. that's Keatings [Cough Lezenges a-showin' up on orr lee now.

The disparagement of the usefulness and mpo. nee of the gather implied in the expression, 'His | fingers are all thumbs,' seems undeserved in view of the important part the 'humb formerly played in the social customs of the people, and the very important part it plays in our own lives.

Lord Erskine, in his 'Institutes,' states that among certain of the lower ranks in Scotland the final settlement of a bargain was always signalized by the licking and joining of thumbs.

Selden, 'Titles of Honor,' says that kissing the thumb was a characteristic of se. vility. The clergy, the rich and the grat, were in receipt of this honor from the tradesmen. From the remotest days of antiquity the practice of licking the thumb has always been regarded as a solemn pledge of promise, existing, according to Tacitus and other authorities, among the Goths, the Iberians and the Moors, and it may also be traced through successive periods down to our own times.

GROWING GIRLS

OCCASIONALLY REQUIRE A TONIC MEDICINE. 4

It Will Keep the Blood Rich, Red and Pure

Mrs. Hiram Rinkler, the wife of s espected farmer in South Pelham town ship. Welland county. Ontario, says :- 'It is with g. at pleasure that I give this tribute to the health restoring virtues of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When my daughter, Lens, new thisteen years of age, began his father decided he would make a mer- the use of your medicine a little over a year ago, she was in a most wretched condition. In fact we were seriously alarmed lest she might not recover. The first symptoms were a feeling of languor and weakness, gradually growing worse. She became pale, lost flesh, had little or no appetite and was apparently going into a decline. Finally the trouble became complicated with a presistent sore throat, which gave her great difficulty in swellowing I gave her several advertised me dicines, but they did not benefit her. Then she was placed under the care of a doctor, who said her blood was poor and watery, and her whole system badly run down. The doctor's treatment did not help her any, and then acting on the advice of a neighbor, I began to give Dr. Will-iams' Pink Pills. The confidence with which this medicine was reged upon us was not misplaced, as I soon ne'iced a distinct improvement in my daughter's condition. The use of the pils for a few weeks longer seemed to completely restore her, and from that time she has been a cheerful, lighthearted girl, the very picture of health. I will always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to other sufferers, feeling sure, they will prove quite as efficacious as they did in my daughter's case.

Mothers with growing daughters will make no mistake if they insist upon the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills; they will help them to develope properly; will make their blood rich and pure and thus ward off disease and decline. The genuine pills are sold only in boxes bearing the full name. 'Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People' on the wrapper around each box. None other is genuine, no matter what some self-interested dealer may say. It in doubt send direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Oat., and the pills will be mailed post paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.
