"BY MEDICINE LIFE MAY BE PROLONGED." — So wrote Shakespeare nearly three hundred years ago. It is so today. Medicine will prolong life, but be sure of the qualities of the medicine. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil used internally will cure coughs and colds, eradicate asthma, overcome croup and give strength to the respiratory organs. Give it a trial.

Burial of Sir John Moore. The death of Sir John Moore at Coruna is probably the best remembered fact in all the checked history of the peninsular war, for a good reason. There are poets, like Shensstone, whose fame is secured by a single quatrain. The poetical reputation of the Rev. Charles Wolfe, who eight years after the event wrote "The Burial of Sir John Moore," rests on that one production alone. Ascribed, before its author's name became known, to such well known poets as Campbell and Byron, the poem took firm hold of a nation's heart. Dying of consumption at the early age of thirty-two, Wolfe's memory will ever be kept green by just that one piece, which "Ingoldsby" parodied, which a million schoolboys have recited, which Lord Byron pronounced to be "the most perfect ode in the language." — London Spectator.

What's in a Name. How we like to hypnotize ourselves with names! Take, for example, the case of the muskrat, an animal of most clean feeding habits, whose flesh is sweet, tender and of delicate flavor. In the winter months muskrat meat is in considerable demand in the markets of the middle Atlantic states, but it sells best as "marsh rabbit" or "water squirrel." So, too, the students of the old Latin quarter in Paris when they expressed a mild doubt of the possibility of rabbit pie at so modest a price were reassured by the suggestion that it might be the "rabbit of the roofs." — Youth's Companion.

Breaking the News. "She won't be able to see you tonight, Mr. Jones," said her little brother. "She's had a terrible accident." "Is that so? What happened?" "All her hair got burned up." "Good heavens! Was she burned?" "Now, was she? There, she don't know about it yet." — Lippincott's.

Melbourne

Appin's baseball team came, saw but failed to conquer on Wednesday last, owing to the fact that Melbourne was "right there." Three of the regulars on the local team were minus, but nevertheless Appin's doom was sealed and they met defeat, taking the bitter dose when victory seemed within reach. Beeswax pitched sterling ball and deserved to win. The boys from Appin played good ball but failed to come through in the pinch. Score, 6-5. What team in the Big 4 League is going outside the three-mile radius? The executive should get busy and see to a few things.

The lawn social of the Church of England, Wednesday evening last on the Old Boys' Park was a very successful affair. The weather was fine and a good crowd was there. A game of baseball, Newbury vs. Wardsville, score 13-2, and basketball, Wardsville High School vs. Newbury team, also brought victory to the home club, score 14-11.
