on a kindred subject. My view of Colonel Amery's abilities and attitude differs from yours. He is exceedingly industrious, always thinks in terms of the Empire, and while he doesn't know Canada as a Canadian, or perhaps as well as he thinks he does, at least knows us better than any other British statesman except the Duke of Devonshire.

I have extracted the portion of your letter referring to the subject discussed above, and have sent it to Mrs. Reford. I have just now been informed that an organization along the lines you have in mind has taken form in Canada principally composed of young business men. I know little about it as yet as it has preserved much secrecy, but I am going to try to find out.

It is very comforting to your friends here to know that the park and city regulations down in Hollywood are so strict. Tom Blacklock feels much less concerned about your moral welfare than he has all along.

A Happy New Year to you and, as well, every good wish to Mrs. Stevenson and yourself.

Yours very truly,
