

1. To entrust to the Inter-American Peace Committee the study of the questions that were the subject of the convocation of this meeting, without prejudice to the special competency of other agencies, and to this end it shall examine:
 - a) methods and procedures to prevent any activities from abroad designed to overthrow established governments or provoke instances of intervention or acts of aggression as referred to in treaties in force, such as the Convention on Duties and Rights of States in the Event of Civil Strife and without impairment to:
 - (i) the rights and liberties of political exiles recognized in the Convention on Territorial Asylum; (ii) the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man; and (iii) the national constitutions of the American states;
 - b) the relationship between violations of human rights or the non-exercise of representative democracy, on the one hand, and the political tensions that affect the peace of the hemisphere, on the other; and
 - c) the relationship between economic under-development and political instability.
2. The Committee may take action, in the performance of its duties, in regard to the subject matter referred to in paragraph 1 of this resolution at the request of governments or on its own initiative, although in either case its activity is subject to the express consent of the states in the case of investigations that would have to be made in their respective territories.
3. The Committee shall immediately initiate broad studies on the questions to which paragraph 1. of this resolution refers, except for those situations governed by other international instruments, and it shall prepare a preliminary report so that the American governments may formulate their observations. This report shall be followed by a definitive report, which is to be presented at the Eleventh Inter-American Conference or, if necessary, to the Meeting of Consultation of Ministers of Foreign Affairs, so that any pertinent decisions may be made.
4. The new powers that this resolution grants temporarily to the Inter-American Peace Committee shall be effective until the close of the Eleventh Inter-American Conference, which shall make the decision as to their definitive inclusion in the statutes of the said Committee.

Resolution XI, finally, calls for increased economic co-operation among the member states of the Organization and the prompt and effective implementation of existing recommendations. The operative part of this Resolution reads as follows:

To recommend that, in view of the forthcoming Eleventh Inter-American Conference, the American governments exert every effort to the end that the Council of the Organization of American States and the other organizations from which action has been called for will promptly and effectively implement the measures proposed by the Special Committee to Study the Formulation of New Measures for Economic Co-operation, of the Council of the Organization of American States, which have already been approved by the Council of the Organization and are designed to establish new foundations for economic co-operation among the American states.
