Many Women Suffer Untold Agony From Kidney Trouble.

Very often they think it is from so-called "female disease." There is less female trouble than they think, Women suffer from backache, sleeplessness servousness, irritability, and a dragging down feeling in the loins. So do men and they do not have "female trouble." Why, then, blame all your trouble to female disease? With healthy kidneys, few women will ever have "female dis orders." The kidneys are so closely con nected with all the internal organs, that when the kidneys go wrong, everything goes wrong. Much distress would be saved if women would only take

Miss Nellie Clark, Lambeth, Ont., cell of her cure in the following words :- "I suffered for about two years with kidaey trouble. I ached all over, especially in the small of my back; not being able to aleep well, no appetite, menstruation irregular, nervous irritability, and backdust deposit in urine, were some of my symptoms. I took Doan's Kidney Pills. The pain in my back gradually left me my appetite returned, I sleep well, and am effectually cured. I can highly ommend Doan's Kidney Pills to al offerers from kidney trouble."

Laundering Fine Doilies Laundering fine linen doilies is at tended with some difficulty, especially when the doilies are fringed. Combing ant the fringe after ironing results dis astrously in a very short time if the linen is really fine. A clever woman liscovered this method, which, after all, may not be new. Great discoveries seldom are. After rinsing the dollies they are floated one by one in a dish of clean, cool water. When the fringes are perfectly smooth and flexible, slip s piece of manila paper or blotting paper under the dolly and left the whole thing out of the water. Let the dolly dry on the paper, and the fringe will need very little combing.

MALABAR

By Frank H. Sweet

Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure

"Do you think Malabar will run?" The girl did not reply, but her lips egan to tremble. The face of the man bending toward her grew dark, but it was the darkness of despair, not of Perhaps if he knew what you have told me." He hesitated. "Malabar is brave and strong and noble. He would not stoop to a small deed."

"I promised him with the new year that he should run for me at the green corn dance. I-I did not know then, tooking piteously into the gloomy, deli-cate face above her. "Malabar would not stoop to a small deed—ne. But this is not small. He has let it be known that he will run for me. He would not turn from his purpose a hair's breadth—not if he saw some-thing in front that would crush him. And—and it is right for a great war-rior, Ankona, but it is hard."

"We will fly, White Egret, into the deepest fastnesses of the Everglades!" he cried hoarsely. "There are places where even Malabar's relentless arms, would be powerless."

But White Egret only looked at him with sorrowful eyes.

"We are Seminoles, Ankona," she rebuked gently. "You know our laws.
You would be the last one to break

His arm fell back impotent. Yes; he would be the last one to break them.
"Perhaps Malabar will not be proof against the black drink this time." he suggested. "He has killed, and it will be made strong. Others have died. But, no, no! Malabar is a great chief and a better man for the tribe than I. He has tasted the black drink before and will not die."

"You say well, Ankona," broke in a stern, powerful voice, and a figure, dark, towering and implacable, stepped from the gathering shadows, "I shall not fall before the black draft. It would not be a fit ending for a war-

White Egret threw back her head and regarded him steadily. Ankona bowed his head "You heard all?" he questioned in strained voice. "All," calmly, "It was childish prat-tle. I shall run for the White Egret, for have I not said it, and has she not made her promise? It is only when we forget our promises that we become weak and childish. Ankona is young yet and should be humored. I will let him run the race with me and will give him one third the distance start as du to his weakness. Now go!"

They went, with a single despairing glance toward each other. Ankona's face was bloodless and set—bloodless with pride crushed, set with foreknowledge of utter inability to cope with this man of fron will and strength. Better be crushed than allowed to exist by sufferance.

Other forms were appearing from the forest-warriers in full headdress and leggings, carrying the guns they had purchased from white traders; squaws with camp equipage, medicine men stalking solemnly and mysteriously, with eyes bent upon the ground; children and dogs, some from the camp or White River bay, some from Okeeche-bee, some from the shifting camp among the keys—all coming for the great annual green corn dance, where tribal laws were to be made, marriages celebrated and criminals punished. These criminals were now moving unwatched, unnoticed, in many cases mknown even, among the others. What-ever crime they had committed during the year had gone unpunished at the time, but now tribal honor brought them here to explate their misdeeds. On the morrow they would be placed in closely shut tents and almost suffecated with steam made by pouring wa ter upon hot stones. After that they would drink of the black draft. If they died, they were guilty. On the other hand, if they were strong enough to survive, their innocence would be clearly established. Later the racing for wives would take place.

Malabar was known to every one-revered, feared, honored. All knew that he was to race for a wife and that before the race he was to drink the oreuded black draft. Ordinarily they would have scoffed at such absurdity if a man drank and lived, it would be a notable proof of attength, but to drink and live and then race for a wife: As to his crime, it was only what any of them would have done if brave enough. He had killed a man! True, but te had been provoked. He must be punished, for that was the law, but punished, for that was the law, but they did not wish him harm.

And they all knew Ankona, the gen-tic one, the dreamer and story maker, and, though none of them revered or feared him, they all had a tender place for him in their hearts. If he could race with White Egret and win her, they would be glad. But Malabar came dirs., for White Egret herself had made

Malabar was the first who presented himself for punishment. While he was in the closed tent the tribe stood about silent, with eyes furtively watching the point whence the condemned would walk forth innocent or be brought forth

At length the tent flap was raised, and he staggered out. For a moment he stood there in the sunlight, his hand to his head, swaying blindly. Then they saw him throw his shoulders backwith a mighty effort, as one whose will, was strong enough to cast off the weight of all things. Slowly he turned the away from them and strolle into the forest to be by himself. That, too, was Malabar's way. Not until the maldens were brought forth did Malabar reappear.

"I will race for my squaw at ouce," he called in a voice that all could hear "before the White Egret grows weak through waiting, and I shall give her one-half the distance start because she is a woman. Ankona will also enter the race with me, and I will give him one-third the distance because he is but half a man. Let them be placed."

The spectators stared and gasped. Ankons, his rival, to enter the race and to be given one-third the distance, and White Egret, the fleet footed, to be given one-half! No one could win a race thus handleapped. And yet was it not Malabar?

He swept them with his glance.

"I shall win," he said confidently, "because I will have it so." Ankons had been watching him with baleful eyes. For an instant he drew back as though to spure the concession. Then, as he saw White Egret being led own position. And for a brief space after the signal was given and they were speeding on with straining muscles he had a wild, insane belief that he would win.

But only for a brief space. Then came that steady, accelerating, im-placable rush behind, drawing nearer and mearer, then opposite, then pass ing. When three-fourths of the distance had been covered, Malabar was four march paces ahead. Suddenly he turned. White Egret was almost with-

"Stop, Ankona!" Malabar called, "Have I not won?" Ankona did not answer.

"Have I not won?" sternly.
"Yes, Malabar, you have won," Ankona answered, and his voice was full of a great despair.
"It is well. Now you may go on and catch the girl. Malabar will have no squaw who does not come to him willingly." And he turned proudly from the race and strode back into the forest.

Some Remarkable Guas. At the siege of Rhodes the Turks constructed mortars by hollowing out cavities in the solid rock at the proper angle, and in the arsenal at Malta is a trophy of the long and glorious defense of Valetta, in a Turkish gun, about a six pounder, composed of a copper tub coiled over with strong rope and "jackted" with rawhide. In the same collection are some antique "quick firers, breechloaders, with small bores and mmensely long barrels, like punt guns. The Malay pirates put great trust in long brass awivel guns called a," and in Borneo these lelas were used as a kind of currency, large sums being estimated in guns.

The Chinese cast excellent bronze guns (there is a fine specimen of them guns (there is a fine specimen of them in Devonport dockyard), but so little did they understand gunnery that in the so called "oplum war" the forts of the Bocca Tigris, defending the Canton river, had the guns bullt immovably into the walls. in the minds of most people with wo-men, ladders, rabbits' feet and horseshoes." said the young girl at the plane "As a matter of fact, however t know that men are fully as superst ... us as the women of my acquaintance, and sometimes more so. One young man of my acquaintance, for instance, who has literary yearnings and who feels sure he could astonish the public with his brilliant stories if he could only get some editor to accept them, spends his summers in the country gathering in-spiration, local color and—four leaf spiration, local color and—four leaf clovers. When winter comes he returns to his hallroom in the city, writes stories by the wholesale and dispatches with each consignment to the editors a four leaf clover. Sometimes the articles are accepted, and then the writer scribes his success to the tallsman. More often, however, they are returned, with the mascot in a more or less crumpled condition, and he spends what leisure hours he has in trying to what leisure hours he has in trying to figure out why it is those clovers don't work every time. Never for a moment does he ascribe failure to any faulta in his manuscripts. Isn't that the limit in the way of superstition?"—Philadelphis Ledger.

Some interesting anecdotes and gos-sip, new and old, of the law courts are given in the English Illustrated Magasine. The writer of the article, Mr. A. J. Hughes, was once present in court when a juror who opened the ball by saying, "This case, my lord, really lies in a nutshell," received the reply, "You crack it then."

There have been times when clever There have been times when clever witnesses have got the better of counsel in a skirmish of words. When the farrier was asked where he got his knowledge of the mare's age from, he said, "From the mare's own mouth,

Irish lawyers are generally endowed by Dame Nature with quick wits. Among them all, perhaps, Carran held the palm for lightness and vivacity. When some one told him that no student should be called to the bar woodd not possess a landed estate of his own, he retorted, "How many acres make a wiseacre?"

But it was a Scotsman, appropriately enough Lord Brougham, who, seeing his horses take fright, yelled to the coachmaa, "Drive into something theps?"

The gradest truth is better than the most cultured lie.

VERY FEW PEOPLE

tre Free From Some Form of Indigestion.

Very few people are free from some form of indigestion, but scarcely two will have the same symptoms. Some suffer most directly after eating, bloating from gas in stomach and bowels, others have heartburn or sour risings, still others have palpitation of heart, headaches, sleeplessness, pains in chest and under shoulder blades, some have extreme nervousness, as in nervous dyspepsia.

But whatever the sym toms may be, the cause in all cases of indigestion is the same, that is the stomach for some reason fails to properly and promptly digest what is eaten. This is the whole story of stomach troubles in a nutshell. The stomach must have rest and assistance and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets give it both by surplying those natural digestives which every weak stomach lacks, owing to the failure of the peptic glands in the stomach to angestives which every weak stomach locks, owing to the failure of the peptic glands in the stomach to secrete sufficient acid and pepsin to thoroughly digest and assimilate the food catea.

One grain of the active principle in Stuart's Dysjepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of meat, eggs or other wholesome food, and this claim has been proven by actual experiment, which anyone can perform for himself in the following manner: Cut a hard boiled egg into very small pieces, as it would be if masticated; place the egg and two or three of the tablets in a bottle or jar containing warm water heated to 98 degrees—the temperature of the body—and kee; it at this temperature for three and one-half hours, at the end of which time the egg will be as completely digested as it would have been in the healthy stomach of a hanger boy.

The point of this experiment is that what Stuart's Dyslepsia Tablets will do to the egg or meat in the stomach and nothing else will rest and invigorate the stomach so safely and effectually. Even a lit-tle child can take Stuart's Tablets with safety and benefit if its diges-tion is weak, and the thousands of cures accomplished by their regular laly use are easily explained when t is understood that they are com it is understood that they are com-posed of vegetable essences, aseptic, pepsin, diastase and Golden Seal, which mingle with the food and di-gest it thorroughly, giving the over-worked stomach a chance to recuper-

Dieting never cures Dyspensia

Dieting never cures Dyslepsia, neither do fills and cathartic medicines, which simply irritate and infisme the intestines.

When enough food is eaten and fromptly digested there will be no constitution, nor in fact will there be disease of any kind, because good digestion means good health in every organ.

The merit and success of Stuart's Dysiepsia Tablits are world-wide and they are seld at the moderate price of 50 cents for full sized package in every drug atore in the United States and Canada, as well as in Europe.

FORMIDABLE GUNS.

The Bombards Used by the Tarks In the Fifteenth Century.

In 1478 Mohammed II., in forming the siege of Scutari, in Albania, employed fourteen heavy hombards, the lightest of which threw a stone shot of 370 pounds weight, two sent shots of 500 pounds, one of 750 pounds, two of 500 pounds, one of 1,200 pounds, five of 1,500 and one of the enormous weight of 1,640 pounds, enormous even in these days, for our 80 ton guns throw only a 1,700 pound projectile, our 100 ton throws one of 2,000 pounds, and the 110 ton throws an 1,800 pound shot with a high velocity.

The stone shot of Mohammed's guns varied between twenty and thirty-two inches in diameter, about the height of a dining table, 2,634 of them fired on this occasion weighing, ac-cording to a calculation of General Lefroy's, about 1,000 tons, and were cut out of the solid rock on the spot.
Assuming twenty-four inches as the average diameter of the shot fired at the siege, the total area of the surface dressed was nearly 32,000 square feet. At this slege the weight of the powder fired is estimated by General Lefroy to have been 250 tons. At the siege of Rhodes in 1480 Mohammed caused sixteen basilisks or double cannon to be cast on the spot, throwing balls two to three feet in diameter.

WHEN A MAN STARVES.

How It Feels to Go Without Food For Seven Days. For the first two days through which a strong and healthy man is doomed to exist upon nothing his sufferings are perhaps more acute than in the remaining stages; be feels an inordinate, unspeakable craving at the stomach night and day. The mind runs upon beef, bread and other substances, but still in a great measure the body retains its strength. On the third and fourth days, but especially on the fourth, this incesmant craving gives place to a sinking and weakness of the stomach, accompanied by nausea.

On the fifth day his cheeks appear hollow and sunken, his body attenuated; his color is asby pale and his eyes wild, glassy and cannibalistic.

The sixth day brings with it increased suffering, although the pangs of hunger are lost in an overpowering languor and sickness. The head becomes dizzy; the ghosts of well remembered dinners pass in hideous procession through the mind.

The seventh day comes, bringing increasing lassitude and further prostra-tion of strength. The mind wanders.

SEEING NOISE.

The Method by Which Sound Waves Are Photographed.

Sound can be photographed by tak-ing advantage of the motion produced in a tuning fork. Sound travels in waves, each corresponding with an oscillation in the fork, which remains in a state of continuous vibration while the note is sounded.

To photograph these sound waves a small mirror is attached to the end of one of the prongs. On this a powerful beam of light is projected by a lens, so as to strike it at an angle of forty-five degrees. The light is again reflected from its surface, but in a new direc-tion, and a very slight alteration in the position of the mirror makes a large one in the reflected beam.

To take the photograph the light is turned upon the mirror in a darkened room, and the tuning fork is set in vibration, while a sensitive plate is rap idly passed in the path of the reflected pencil of light. On development the plate shows sound waves recorded as a wavy line, and each note has characteristic curves.

The Mad Ambassador. There was a tragic little scene imme-diately preceding the marriage of King Edward VII. when he was the Prince of Wales. With several of his royal relatives he was staying at the Prussian embassy in Rome, where his host was the German ambassador, Baron

He appeared at dinner one night in his dressing gown and slippers and to haif the royalites of Europe exclaimed:
"Is this to go on much longer? I am heartily sick of it, and it must come to n end at once."

They carried him to his room and the next day removed him to an asylum, a raving lunatic.

Brocking and Ricep.

Dr. Manacoine, the famous Russian authority on sleep phenomena, says that rocking is an artificial method of inducing slumber. The process fatigues consciousness by a series of monotonous sensations and incidentally deprives the brain of its blood supply. Absence of blood from the brain makes sleep. The influence of the luliaby is objectionable, but not equally so. A baby will go to sleep unaided when it needs sleep.
