

After the War: What?

There are in Ontario 225,000 people working in ammunition factories. When the war is over some 200,000 of our soldier boys will return from the front. They will want permanent positions somewhere. The government expects there will also be a great immigration from Europe. At least 400,000, and possibly more, will have to be "settled down" in the re-adjustment days after the war.

Through our Saskatchewan elevator system:—

We secure better prices for wheat sold by the load.

We improve local grain marketing conditions.

We provide space for special binning a farmer's grain.

We have handled 40 million bushels (approximately) of the 1915 Western crop.

All profits belong to the farmers themselves.
