Dutheld, for trespass on his land at Cloneen, on the 31st January, after having been warned off. Mr. P. A. Brown appeared for complainant, and Mr. Thorp for defendant, After hearing arguments at considerable length, the chairman announced the decision of the bench, dismissing the case. Mr. Thorp asked for costs, not for the money value, but in order to put an end to such vexatious proceedings. The chairman said the bench were divided as to giving costs, and consequently they would not be allowed.

The people of Emo and Courtwood, Queen's County, have learned with great regret of the departure from amongst them of the Rev. John Phelan, after a connection of over twelve years with the parish. Father Phelan has been appointed to the pastoral charge of Rathvilly, as successor to the late Rev. P. C. Nolan. During Father Phelan's administration in Emo he erected a magnificent church.

Dublin.

"The Castle" has descended on unpleasant days: from its hangings to its balls it is equally unfortunate. "A J.P., and D. L.," writes to a Dublin paper to complain that the landlord gentry, who throng the levees and drawing-rooms, are excluded from the dances, which are devoted to the gay young officers of the garrison, and the civillan and lady friends of his Excellency's aides de-camp. The poor gentry!—after all their sacrifices!

Iather, the Part of J.M.

A great sensation was sought to be made in Youghal over a seizure of arms. An old rusty sword was discovered in the house of a person living in a lane, for laving which the unfortunate man is to be tried under the Arms Act. The discovery of this arm is propitious for the authorities, especially coming so soon after the late National League meeting in the town, and comes delightfully in at this season, when a renewal of coercion is so much wanted, in order to make things pleasant and remunerative for the police of the constitutional? leaders, and that many looked on their efforts in Fermanagh as utterly useles, inasmuch as a large number, even of Protestants, would vote for Parnell.

At Rathangan, on Feb. 8, after last Mass, a meeting was held in the chapelyard, at which Mr. Barry, M. P., delivered a very impressive address to an immense gathering. On the same day, at Kiltubrid, county Leitrim, the old Branch there was reorganized, and new officers elected. The Castle has long since learned the usefulness of Leitrim special jurors. They are as pliable as if they were selected in Dublin and Belfast; and this is always the Dublin and Belfast; and this is always the case whenever Justice Lawson or one of his genus happens to be on the bench. Under such circumstances, it is nowise pleasing to hear that a change of venue has been resorted to in the case of John Nolan, who is charged with conspiracy to murder. As the coming of a great storm is heralded by the display of cautionary signals, so is the approach of that dread and fatal disease, Consumption of the and fatal disease, Consumption of the Lungs, usually announced in advance by pimples, blotches, eruptions, ulcers, glandular swellings, and kindred outward manifestations of the internal blood poison, which, if not promptly expelled from the system, attacks the delicate tissues of the lungs, causing them to ulcerate and break down. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is the great remedy for this, as for all diseases having their origin in bad blood. THE "STABAT MATER."

NOTES ON A PROTESTANT'S TRANSLATION OF THE FAMOUS HYMN. An excellent translation of the "Stabat Mater Dolorosa" has been published by the Watchman, a Baptist journal, and the best one in the country. The translator, W. S. McKenzie, praises the fervor of the grand lyric, making it second after the "Dies Irae" of those of the "Latin Church," He says.

Church." He says:
"It breathes the spirit of profound repentance and glowing love, such as can be kindled only by long and intense contem-plation of the mystery of the Cross. The platon of the mystery of the Cross. The agony of Mary at the Cross, and the sword which then pierced through her soul, according to the prophecy of Simeon, never found more perfect expression. The keynote of the hymn is contained in the first two lines, and is suggested by the brief but pregnant sentence of St. John—
'Stabat natura crucem mater eight?' Stabat juxta crucem mater ejus."

This is encouraging from our separated brethren of the Baptist persuasion. It shows that they are advancing into the light. We cannot see the force of the remark, however, that "it is to be regretted that such a hymn should be disfigured by Mariolatry." Without what he is pleased to call "Mariolatry" we greatly doubt if the writer of the hymn could have written who is as popular a landlord as he is a Parliamentary representative, dispensed, as is his custom, with the usual adjuncts to meetings of the kind in Ireland—the Motherhood is exactly what protects the when he got to their houses he found that all the doors, both of dwelling and outhouses, were taken off and removed, so that the sheriff could not take or give possession.

The years of adolescence are often full of restlessness. The boy is, perhaps, overflowing with vivacity, and gay spirits lead him to do and say things which look idle and foolish to grave middle age. On the other hand, he may develop a tendency to morbidness, retiring into himself, and republing sympaths. pelling sympathy. Either way he requires delicate handling. It is an inestimable benefit to a boy to be confidential with his mother at this period of life, telling her his trials and troubles, and receiving her counsel.

As a rule, mothers do not pet their older children enough. The sweet, soft words, the caresses which are lavished on the babies are not freely bestowed on the older children. And yet a mother's ten-der hands smoothing her big boy's brow, her fingers straying through his hair, her kiss in passing him, are tangible evidences of her love, which are beyond price.

It is beautiful to see the knightly grace, the lover-like devotion, which so show their mothers. Be assured that if you would have this crown of crowns, you must win it by being your boy's friend all the way on from his babyhood. Do not be afraid of demonstration. Many a hungry soul is half famished in the midst of plenty, simply because those around him are so afraid of showing their affection by speech and smile and touch.

How to Make Yourself Unhappy.

In the first place, if you want to be miserable, be selfish. Think all the time of your own things. Don't care for any-body else. Have no feelings for any one regular are just as much concerned as if it were a pound of gold. Never yield a point. Be very sensitive, and take everything that is said to you in playfulness in the most serious manner. Be jealous of your friends lest they should not think enough of you, and if at any time they should seem to neglect you, but the worst should seem to neglect you, put the worst construction you can upon their conduct.

Governed by Women.

Among the colonial possessions, or, more correctly, dependencies, of Holland, there is a remarkable little state which, in its onstitution and the original costume of constitution and the original costume of its inhabitants, surpasses the boldest dreams of the advocates of woman's rights. In the Island of Java, between the cities of Batavia and Samarang, is the kingdom of Bantam, which, although tributary to Holland, is an independent state. The sovereign is, indeed a man thought to Holland, is an independent state. The sovereign is, indeed, a man, but all the rest of the government belongs to the fair sex. The king is entirely dependent upon his state council. The highest authorities, military commanders and soldiers are, without exception, of the female sex. These Amazons ride in the masculine style, wearing sharp steel points instead of any sex. masculine style, wearing sharp steel points instead of spurs. They carry a pointed lance, which they swing gracefully, and also a musket, which is discharged at full gallop. The capital of this little state lies in the most picturesque part of the island, in a fruitful plain, and is defended by two well-kept fortresses.

The object of this work is to state the difficulties urged by Unbelief against Catholic christianity planily and even foreiby. The answers are directed chiefly to common sense, and are supported by plain matter-offact demonstrations, carefully selected on account of their simplicity, from hosts of others more suited to the schools. The whole plan of the work is conceived on the same principles. If at times the author is led into the path of controversy, he leaves the well-beaten track as soon as possible, satisfying himself with noting in characters that cannot be mistaken by ordinary intelligence the essential marks of true Catholic teaching.
