Baron Von Liebig wrote in 1859, relative to these sayings and quoted from Golumella. He says: "All these rules had, as history tells us, only a temporary effect. They hastened the decay of Roman agriculture, and the The straw when he had threshed the farmer ultimately found that he had exhausted all his expedients to keep his fields fruitful and reap remunerative grove from them. Even in Columella's time, the produce of the land was only four-fold."

He quotes Abraham Lincoln as follows: "The thought recurs that education, cultivated thought, can best be combined with agricultural labor, or any labor, on the principle of thorough work, that careless, half performed, slovenly work makes no place for such combination; and thorough work, again renders sufficient the smallest quantity of ground to each man; and this, again, conforms to what must occur in a world less inclined to wars and more devoted ation must increase rapidly, more rapidly than in former times, and ere long the most valuable of all arts will be the Money to Loan at Current Rates art of deriving a comfortable subsistence from the smallest area of soil.
