COXEY OUT AGAIN

"There's a change coming in the United States. It will either be an evolution or a revolution. And I am afraid the last will be first."

"Roosevelt and Bryan are both four-flushers. Bryan killed the populist principles. Now that another party awakening is on the way, Roosevelt is doing the same thing."

This was the declaration of "General" J. S. Coxe, who, in 1894, led the famous Coxe army across the continent to the door of the White House to demand redress. Coxe has gone to New York to make a second attempt to redress what he calls the wrongs of the people. This time, however, instead of bringing with him an army of out-of-work people, he is bringing a bank account of $3,000,000 made from his rock quarry at Massillon, Ohio. The $3,000,000, he declares, is going to be spent in a campaign of education to bring about an evolution in the United States instead of a revolution.

What Coxe now proposes to do is to educate the nation up to the point of having the government take over the country's railway, telegraph and telephone properties and through them establish a system of currency that will do away with the national banking system and will give the people full control of the currency.

"The money issue is the only issue that counts," Coxe declared today. "The hollering about the tariff is like digging a woodchuck when you're hunting roon."

"My ideas have not changed since I led Coxe's army across the grass to Washington. There is only this difference: I had little money then and people laughed at me. Now I have millions and my ideas are being accepted in high places."

"But there must be a new independent political organization, through which the big issues can be decided. No use talking about conservation. There is nothing left to conserve. They've stolen it all."

"There will be a political change this fall. But it will do no good. The republican grafters will merely go out and the democratic grafters will come in. Neither party is on the level.

"To bring about, therefore, the new independent party, I will expend my $3,000,000 in educating the public."

One of the means, he declared, will be a special train with a tent and military band annexed that will take him across the country and permit of the holding of educational meetings. If the $3,000,000 he now has is not sufficient, he declares he will go back to his rock quarry at Massillon, Ohio, and make more.

WELL PAID

A lively-looking porter stood on the rear platform of a sleeping-car in the Grand Central Station, when a fussy and choleric old man clambered up the steps. He stopped at the door, puffed for a moment, and then turned to the man in uniform.

"Porter," he said, "I'm going to Chicago. I want to be well taken care of. I pay for it. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir; but—"

"Never mind any 'buts.' You listen to what I say. Keep the train-boys away from me. Dust me off whenever I want you to. Give me an extra blanket, and if there is any one in the berth over me, slide him into another. I want you to—"

"But, say, boss, I—"

"Young man, when I'm giving instructions I prefer to do the talking myself. You do as I say. Here is a two-dollar bill. I want to get the good of it. Not a word, sir."

The train was starting. The porter pocketed the bill with a grin, and swung himself to the ground.

"All right boss," he shouted, "you can do the talkin' if you want to. I'm powerful sorry you wouldn't let me tell—but I ain't goin' out in that train.—Exchange."
