OUR SCHOOLS.

A despatch from Toronto tells us that the Whitney Government is busy with the education question, and will have a bill ready for next session, which will thoroughly shake up the Ontario school system. Mr. Whitney, we understand, proposes to banish everything in the way of fads and frills from the public schools, to make the teaching of standard subjects more thorough, and to generally carry out the reform he advocated on the stump when in opposition. It is a big undertaking; but Mr. Whitney and his colleagues will make faithful endeavor to better the schools and to give the children the benefit of a thorough course in the three Rs. There will also be some changes in the high schools.

THE READING HABIT.

Only an occasional advertiser in this day considers it necessary to trick the public into reading his announcements. Most business men have learned that it is the habit of nearly all potential buyers to read advertisements in the newspapers. "The people read advertisements," says a prominent agent, "because they read other things and have an interest in what is offered for sale." In this day of first class newspapers at low prices comparatively few persons fail to read a newspaper. The people are intelligent enough to be influenced by plain and sincere arguments.

HENRY IRVING, THE ACTOR AND THE MAN.

In the death of Sir Henry Irving the world loses not a great genius, but a nobly poetic mind; not a great actor in the sense that posterity must judge greatness, but an imposing character. It was character more than art that won for Sir Henry Irving a high place in the drama of the English-speaking world. He stood quite alone and his eminence was a lofty one. It has been a turbulent career since that dreadful night in 1856 when Irving, then a lanky boy, attempted madly to recall the lines of the Duke of Orleans in "Rochester" and was hissed from the Sunderland stage. Upward he has gone by slow and laborious steps. There have been few flights. Sir Henry's was not inspirational art. It was work, study, discipline—more work. In the drudgery days of the stock company Sir Henry played no less than 428 distinct characters. That was the foundation of his success. Boundless ambition and a methodical perseverance did the rest. "Hamlet," "Rochester," "Charles the First," "Macbeth," "Richard," and "Louis the Eleventh"—all these have lifted England's foremost actor to the pinnacle from which the light is now turned in the ripe fullness of his fame. The world knows Sir Henry Irving best for two historic roles, his nearest approach to greatness, his strongest claim to the recognition that art bestows upon the genius of portrayal. They are his "Shakespeare" and his "Mathias" in "The Bells." No one who has seen that wonderful picture of a conscience-stricken man can forget Sir Henry Irving.

That same strength of character, that same force of personality that won for Sir Henry Irving the English-speaking world's appreciation have contributed mightily to the splitting of dramatic ideals. He set a lofty aim for art. He was high standards. And in his work, in his study, in his tenets, in his life, he lived up to them. It may be argued that so strong a personality inevitably brings mannerisms that mar characterization, destroy versatility and prevent the complete illusion which is the essence of art. That undoubtedly is so. Sir Henry Irving's methods, particularly in his latter days, were not elastic. But so profound was his feeling, so sure his touch, so sincere was his interpretation and so firm his grasp upon his role that one was lost in admiration of the man who was playing, rather than the character of the man who was being played. It is a potent influence for the highest ideals of art that has gone from us. Time is needed for readjustment. We are not of the class to see in this bereavement the breaking of the last tie between the stage of the hour and the stage of yesterday. The event is lamentable but not calamitous. It is merely grief for a gifted and venerated friend.

There are ways of leaving commands which make them seem oppressive.

Starving in Chatham!

Men and Women Who Are in Need—Liberal Offer

There are scores of people in Chatham and vicinity who are starving in the midst of plenty. This is not because they are in need of food, but because they cannot digest the food they eat.

To help these unfortunate our leading druggists have recently received a large supply of Mi-o-na, the most recent discovery for the cure of stomach troubles.

Mi-o-na is an unusual combination of remedies for the stomach and digestive organs that heretofore have been little known in this country. It soothes and heals the irritated mucous membrane of the stomach, stimulates the solar plexus, and strengthens the nervous system.

One little tablet out of a 50-cent box of Mi-o-na before meals, and you can eat what you like and when you like. You will have no more headaches, backaches, heart-burn, or indigestion. Mi-o-na will give you perfect health and strength.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

EVANGELISTIC UNION NOTES

Friday a good day for fasting, so use the noon hour visiting suffering friends and patients at the General Hospital; a better feast than earthly viands. Quite a surprise to note so many well known faces as we pass through the wards, glad to get such good reports from the faithful nurses of our friends whom we are not permitted to see, visit the sun bath to find a cheerful group there, and one happy husband preparing to take his wife home who is restored to health. After some precious words from God's Book and prayer with them we say farewell, but an old man leads us to his room for earnest converse on "what must I do to be saved?" and his heart is so stirred he is found at the soldier's Sunday sunrise service this delightful morning, which means about a mile walk there and back before breakfast. A blessed half hour is spent at St. Joseph's Hospital, where a real restful spirit prevails this lovely Sunday morning; the tidy orderly but busy nurses are at work, the calm collected movements of the sisters need no notice of "silence" on their walls, but it is needed for us unruly outsiders. No more beautiful outlook in this county than from their windows both front and rear, the winding river, the waving bougainvillee, the cold fingers of winter, the charming homes of our citizens all bathed in glorious sunshine, make pictures that are healing balms and medicines without money and without price. Providence little church on the River Road, Raleigh, built over 30 years ago and lately much improved, have their harvest home to-day. We reach it at eleven; the service of praise just on their young choir is the greater morning and evening; his text is a good one for the occasion, "for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." His sermon was capital, full of bright illustration, but some warms revival thought throughout. The Sunday school was withdrawn for the day and Mr. Peters, the pastor, announced for special thanksgiving offerings instead of the old time time meeting, but some warms nothing can touch a country community in its every home like an old fashioned tea fight. If Mr. Huff's table is a sample of the way people dine round Providence they assuredly live well. Down comes the rain to spoil the wheezy, so a visit to a Raleigh Sunday school is proposed, and we hurry home in time to join in the service at the Home of the Friendless. Mr. Putnam conducts it admirably, expounds the 103 Psalm, two nice little lassies give us a sweet duet and three older ones a trio; afterward many inmates, the lady visitors, Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Martin, the manager and matron all testify. The matron tells us how these services are enjoyed by the old people, how they talk about them and what a happy and profitable break up to the monotony of old age they are. The cap sheet was an address from Rev. Mr. Rutledge on "Simon the Zealot," vindicating spiritual religious zeal in the service of God.

WHAT IS THERE IN IT?

Scott's Emulsion is a careful blend of the purest cod liver oil, hypophosphites of lime and soda, glycerine and a dash of flavoring. JOSEPH MURPHY.

Of whom it has been said "He is incarnate Irish humor, one leading peculiarity of which is that he feeds upon himself," will be seen here next Monday, supported by an excellent company. Mr. Murphy's portrayal of Dan O'Hara in his entertaining play, "Kerry Gow," is an artistic creation, and one that is a complete success. The transformation is complete and admirable. Both characters (or rather both sides to one character) are highly diverting and Mr. Murphy takes advantage of every hint that is offered to illuminate the mirth that is inherent in them.

Mr. Murphy is the central figure in "Kerry Gow." He has the sweetest smile—a smile like old Fritz Baumet—and his voice is still possessed of its mellowness. The next night the true Irishman, using the Celtic wit to win laughs, instead of low comedy. His pathos is rich and touching.

Tar and Feathers.

"The Greek was the first to apply tar and feathers to the body of an offender," said a doctor. "Then, as now, this punishment of the victim was considered one of the worst possible. In fact, tarring and feathering was considered a greater punishment than hanging. It was a living punishment of the most repulsive kind. A certain extent through the skin takes place, and in the naked skin assures this is a very important part of the aerating process. In man the skin does about one-third part of the work, while the lungs do the rest. It has been demonstrated that frogs live but a few hours after having been given a coat of varnish. A man that is so unfortunate as to receive a coat of tar and feathers so soon as freed from his persecutors seeks to free himself from the recently applied tar. A man with good kidneys could endure longer such an application than one suffering from an attack of any disease affecting the kidneys. Death might follow his suffering. The skin is a great absorbent agent."

Democracy on Warships.

Visitors to the big warships in the navy yard are astonished at the way the men address their officers with the title of "Mr." Everybody below the grade of captain on the ship is addressed with a simple "Mr." This is to save time, as commander, lieutenant commander, lieutenant and midshipman require too much time to enunciate. A national guard officer of rank below that of major visiting the yard the other day was surprised to hear a lieutenant commander referred to as "Mr." The very thought of such a thing happening to him in the army made him almost shiver. "Ah," said he, "I see why it is. The officers are on board day after day, while we guard officers are in the army only now and then. Consequently, we can stand a little waste of time in hearing our titles uttered."

The Silt in the Coat Lapel.

A unique and beautiful custom among the orthodox Jews is directly responsible for the angular silt in the lapel of the modern coat. The Jew when death visits his household takes a knife and, cutting the lapel, murmurs in Yiddish, "O God, I accept thy judgment." This custom has come down from antiquity and is known as "krea" (rending the garment). The cutting of "krea" is associated with such solemn and religious obligations that many a stern Hebrew father, as a punishment for a son or daughter who marries out of the faith, will rend his garment as a token of the death of such a child. The act is emblematic of the profound grief, but also has its comforting influence, for it accepts with the resignation of the truly religious Jew the will of the Almighty.

A Story With a Moral.

A prominent New York banker was dilating on the dangers of deceit. By way of illustration, he told of a society woman who saw a jeweler's window a collector of pearls that she wanted. She inquired the price and was told $3,000. She gave her check for $3,000, saying she would send her husband to see the pearls, but the jeweler was to tell him they cost only $3,000. The storekeeper was familiar with that sort of game and agreed. The husband came to see the pearls, and that evening told his wife he had bought them. His wife delightedly asked if he had brought home the collar, whereupon he replied: "No, dear, it seems to me rather. You know, it is her birthday tomorrow."

Horrible Heroism.

One of the Revolution's gunners was standing by his gun as the ship sheered abreast of De Grasse's flagship. The gunner was all ready, just going to fire, when a shot came in at the port and took his leg off at the knee. As quick as thought the man pulled off his neckcloth and tied his leg above the stump. The next instant he seized his shot off limb and thrust it into the muzzle of the gun, which went off two seconds later. "My foot!" shouted the man exultantly, "is the first to board the Ville de Paris."—Fraser's "Famous Fighters."

A Famous Beauty.

Mme. de Remusat had features so perfect that her contemporaries said she was worthy to sit as a model for a Greek goddess. The flesh of her face closely resembled alabaster, and yet she was not pale and did not give the impression of being in delicate health. Her beauty attracted universal attention to her, no matter where she went, and even in old age she retained most of her good looks.

GOOD SOCIAL

A musical treat such as one may not very often hear was given by Hind's choir to those who, in spite of the threatening weather, made their way to Hind's Methodist church, Dover, on Wednesday evening last. The chief features of the evening were Dr. DeCov's violin solos. The doctor certainly can bring from a violin all the music that there is in it. The other numbers of the program were also rendered in excellent style. The program was as follows:

Prayer—Pastor, A. L. Brown.

Violin solo—Dr. DeCov.
