Nearly Lost in a Manitoha Blizzard.

A letter from Portage La Frairie to the Winnipeg Free Press, dated December 12, gives the following thrilling account of an adventure in the late snow shorm on the plains of Manitoha:

Wednesday's storm was really a very dreadful one. The people who did attempt to brave the hurricane of wind and blinding snow repented before they had gone far. Hon. Attorney General Walker in attempting to reach the Portage nearly lost his life. It seems that he was some six miles from this place, when his horse by plunging through the snow drifts, mearly upset the cutter, and eventually hoke it. In the blinding outing storm, the hon. gentleman was forced to attempt to remedy the break, but in doing so hebecame numbed with the cold. Failing get the break repaired, he attempted to put some articles which had been thrown out of the cutter, into it again. To do this he had to leave the horse alone for a second or so. The poor animal, finding its master gone, made a dart forward, cleared itself out of the drift, and left the damaged outer behind it in the bank of snow. The Attorney-General managed to chase the horse for some distance, until the heavy drifts so impeded his and the animal's progress that it was captured near a fence. Mr. Walker was by this time so exhaused that he was barely able to get upon the horse's back. For some two hours he battled with the blinding snow. At last, speechless, and almost frozen to death, he arrived near a bouse, and sank down before the door of it, too much worn out and two weak to even knöck. He says he had an idea that if he could get his feet up against the door new old make an effort to rouse some one to hear him, but he had no power to even do this. Fortunately for him, the owner of the house, Mr. McDonald, happened to come outside of the door a short time after, and found Mr. Walker says he began to understand that he was a living man. His escape was wonderful, and thanks are due to Mf. McDonald for the expeditious manner in which he did all he could fo

Judge Elliott at the interim sessions, London, the other day sentenced Henry Jackson to three years' imprisonment in the penitentiary on three convictions of horse stealing. The father and brother of this prisoner are at present serving terms in the penitentiary for counterfeiting.
