Poor Substitute for Kissing.

But among the absurd ancient Egyptians they substituted the prattee of smelling instead of osculation. In phrases in the Egyptian languages where we should expect to find a mention of kissing the texts spen of smelling, or, more exactly, of acting with the nose. Between persons of equal rank this was done directly, in approaching Pharaoi such personal intercourse was not correct. Then the subject smelled the soil before the King. Only distinguished functionaries were honored by the Pharaoh, as is told in a text of the fourth dynasty, by permission to smell his leg instead of the soil.

Originally it was necessary for the soil. Originally it was necessary for the comer to throw himself on the floot to perform this greeting. In later time the Egyptians rendered till action more comfortable; they made only a deep reverence, touching the earth with the outstretched fingers, but they did not change the old designation for this greeting; they speak in this period of "smelling the earth with the outstretched fingers,"

"What's queer announcement on the bottom of the bill of fare. The proprietor will be glad to receive complaints?"

"Why should the proprietor be glad' to receive complaints?"

"Because then he knows the customers are not getting more than their money's worth."— Catholic Standard and Times.

HOME WITH A FORTUNE

Family.

New York, Jan. 3.—J. W. Rees, who up to 1897 was salesman for a New York woollen house, has returned home after being mourned for dead, says a special to the Press, from Lockport, N. Y. He is back from the Klondike a rich man.

He left Juneau on Dec. 6th, hoping to get home in time to give to his relatives and friends a pleasant Christmas surprise, but was delayed by storms. He left New York in August, 1897, for Seattle, and was one of the pioneers who cut the trail through to Dawson City, occupying four months in going 40 miles of the Skagway. He exchanged his surplus food for rich claims.

Rees brought back $10,000 in gold, and owns valuable maining interests near Atlan, British Columbia, which he will work on his return there next spring.

Hilnois Man Shackled to the Floor to Keep Him In.

Paris, Ill., Jan. 3.—With chains padlocked to his ankies and the other ends being attached to staples in the floor of his room, William Donnehoy, of the town of Kansas, in this county, is obeying a smallpox quarantine order he has persisted in ignoring.

This novel method was adopted by Mayor Steele, after Donnehoy had left home, where his son was sick with smallpox, in defiance of the order of the authorities. Donnehoy went through the town yesterday, although forbidden to leave the house, and the Mayor could find no other way to prevent him from exposing citizens to danger.

The chains, two in number, are riveted to the bedroom floor, and are long enough to permit Donnehoy to walk around a little or to lie down on a cot, but he cannot reach the walls of his room and he cannot free kimself. The Mayor's order is to keep the shackles on until the quarantine on the house is raised.

The mayor's action has the indorsement of the entire community.

Thomas florris, Sen.

For the last 35 years, ever since the present edifice was built, Mr. Thomas Morris has been recording steward of First Methodist Church. Recently he handed in his resignation, owing to advancing years, and, with regret it was accepted. At the watchinght service in the church the good will toward and appreciation of the long services of Mr. Morris were acknowledged in a pleasant way. On behalf of the church Mr. Hugh Murray read an address, and Mr. W. G. Moore presented Mr. Morris with a purse of gold. In a feeling reply the recipient spoke most enterainingly about the historical events of the years since 1867, when he took office. He has served under sixteen different ministers in that time, and has seen the church grow and spread out in all branches of the work. He has also taken part in the jubilee and diamond jubilee. Other speakers also referred to events of history in connection with the congregation, and extended their best wishes to Mr. Morris.

BUSINESS SUSPENDED.

Closed.

When the holders of the trading stamp books go to the local store on King street east, they find that there is nothing doing. The blinds are down and there is a notice posted in the window which reads as follows:

To Trading Stamp Collectors:
Your City Council has seen fit to pass a bylaw prohibiting us giving or receiving our trading stamps. We have now a case in the courts contesting the validity of the act unde which the by-law was passed, but have not yet been able to obtain a decision, and we must obey the law so long as it is in force. We are therefore obliged to close our doors temporarily. In the meantime we would request that you retain all stamps that you have on hand, as we feel confident that the decision when rendered will be in our favor. We regret that those who have the power have seen fit to interfere with our business, and the responsibility rests with them. Yours truly, Dominion Trading Stamp Co.

WANTS HIS SALARY.

Mr. Bernard K. Sandwell Suing the Morning Post Co.

Acting for Mr. Bernard K. Sandwell, now of the Montreal Herald, Mr. J. L. Counsell has issued a writ against the Morning Post Printing Co., which shut up shop some months ago, for $440 salary. Mr. Sandwell was managing editor of the defunct paper, and evidently is one of the creditors of the company who has not been settled with.

Part of the claim is for three months' salary not earned; his contract called for three months' notice of discharge, it is said.

REFERENCE NOT NEEDED, Judge Falconbridge Thinks,

in Kramer-Irwin Case.

STORY OF THE STONE PILE.

City Solicitor Mackelean this morning received a copy of the judgment—In the suit of the city against the Kramer-Irwin Compeny. It contains a couple of clauses that did not appear in the news shat which are of interest to the city corporation and will be to the citizens. The judgment says:

It becomes unnecessary to pass upon the specific issues of fact presented in the pleadings and evidence, for the plaintiffs are entitled to succeed to the full extent claimed. It is not a case in which anyuting turns upon demensor of witnesses, and if a different view of the rights of the parties under the contract should be taken in another place, the other necessary findings can be as well made from the evidence in black and from the evidence in black and white as by me.
