Disease-Laden BreadDOCTOR APPEALS FOR CLEANER HANDLING.

The danger to health from the contamination of bread by handling is emphasized in the Journal of State Medicine by Dr. C. E. Goddard, medical officer of health for Wembley.

Tracing the loaf from the oven to the breakfast-table, Dr. Goddard says that freely handled by people of whom there is no evidence that their hands are clean. It is exposed to pollution in unwashed carts, and may be left on the doorstep, where dogs, cats, children and dust cause further pollution.

What happened inside the house might be even worse.

"Every kind of microbe culture has been made from soiled bread," Dr. Goddard states. "Dr. Inman, bacteriologist to the Brompton Hospital, recently made microbe cultures from the crust of bread bought from delivery vans in the West End and obtained streptococci (a most deadly species of microbes) from one loaf in every five."

If the bread is wrapped in waxed paper, as The Daily Mail has frequently advocated, the danger would be removed and no night baking would be necessary, for bread a day old is indistinguishable from new bread. The bread keeps fresh for four or five days. There is no loss to the baker from stale bread, and, most important of all, the bread is delivered clean to the consumer.—Daily Mail.

Went 8,000 Miles to Hold Trial

Tells Experiences Meeting Justice to Eskimo Manslaughterers.

Experiences on his journey of 8,000 miles to the Northland where he went with three other members of the Quebec Bar to meet out justice to Eskimos accused of the murder of a Newfoundland trader, were described recently by L. A. Rivet, K.C., who addressed a meeting held under the auspices of the North End Liberal Club in St. Michael's School Hall, Clarke Street. The northern coast of Baffin Land was the seat of the crime, a territory 2,700 miles from here in direct line, but only reached by a devious route.

The story of the murder of the trader, Robert S. Jones, was recounted. The trouble had arisen over foxskins, and the Eskimos claimed that the murdered man had threatened to kill them. In self-defence one of their number agreed to shoot him. The trial lasted five days. One Eskimo found guilty of manslaughter, was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary, a second found guilty of manslaughter with recommendation for mercy was given two years imprisonment, and a third was acquitted. The Canadian Government had decided on the holding of the trial in the Far North to impress the natives with the fact that Canadian justice existed for them, and that the Dominion claimed sovereignty over the northern islands. William Patterson, K.C., presided.

TRUE FRIENDSHIP.

Some like you for the things you own. Some like you for the power you wield. Do not receive the flattery shown the purpose mutually concealed. Many will smile when skies are blue. But friends to share the storms are few.

The growth of friendship true is slow. 'Tis not the conquest of the hour; the roots deep in your life must grow. Before the snow can bud and flower. Look to the garden and be wise!

What blossoms quickly, early dies.

Put not your trust in every smile. Give not your heart to all who call. Look back across the rugged miles. Who followed then, lest you should fall?

Who of the strong in victory's train. Should failure threaten, would remain?

Cherish your friendships! They are few. And you shall learn this through the years: Many will share life's joys with you. But only true friends share your fears. Sweet is men's flattery, but he who What blossoms quickly, soonest dies.
