WHISKARD'S

"The nursing-bottle Parliament it should be called," says the clever Boston Herald, in speaking of the new English House, and really, when one considers the cause of Lord Salisbury's return to power it is not an unfitting appellation. A most unusual number of young men were returned by the recent elections, among them the Viscount Milton, who is only 23 years of age. For the next number of years it is expected that the Government benches will present a very juvenile appearance.

A new poet has risen in the North-west, and he writes verses like this: "I never saw a purple cow, I never hope to see one, But I can tell you anyhow, I'd rather see than be one."

Max Nordau says that we are degenerating, but with such evidence of genius we must beg leave to differ with the scientist.

While the world holds happy children and indulgent parents, and "love's old story" is ever new and sweet, the annual protest against plagues will avail little! They will be classed as abominations by people without sympathy for simple innocent enjoyment, claiming that a feast out of doors affords invitation to every winged and creeping thing, and is, therefore, common and decidedly uncomfortable. Nevertheless, long, happy days will be spent in the shaded woods, pleasant in social intercourse, merry with jest and song, and there, as in no other banqueting hall, will

"Good digestion wait on appetite, And health on both."

The German name for street car is Pferdstrassenbahnwagen. It looks formidable, but so would the English equivalent if written in one word in the German style, horsecar-railway-carriage.

There was once a prominent man in Chicago who had a very exalted opinion of his own city. He died, and when he reached his eternal home, he looked about him with much surprise and said to the attendant who had opened the gate for him: "Really, this does great credit to Chicago. I expected some change in heaven. The attendant eyed the Chicagoan a second, and then observed: "This isn't heaven."—Philadelphia Record.

An English journal tells a good story at the expense of Lord Derby. Whether he drew from it a moral no one can say, but it may suggest to the impartial reader that if one feudal restriction is to continue, there is no very evident reason why another should not be revived.

The earl was one day walking over his estate, when he met a collier who was also strolling there, but without permission. "Do you know you are walking on my land?" inquired the nobleman. "Thy land?" was the reply. "Well, I've got no land myself, and I'm like to walk on somebody's. Where did it get it from?"

"Oh," explained his lordship, "I got it from my ancestors."

"An' wheer did they get it from?" "They got it from their ancestors." "An' wheer did their ancestors get it?" "They fought for it."

"Well," said the collier, squaring up to the earl, "I'll defend the for it. Perhaps the moral is none the worse for the doubt inevitably suggested that a nobleman would waste many minutes in giving a trespasser reasons for ceasing to trespass."

Mayor's Secretary: "You can't see the mayor now; he's in his private office." Seedy Politician: "What right's he got to private office? It wuz a public office we elected him to, wuzn't it? You tell him to come right out, quick, or I'm agin him."

There is a story of Thackeray, shortly after the publication of "Vanity Fair," dining with a friend, and receiving an introduction to his next neighbor, "Capt. Crawley, of the Life Guards." Thackeray looked greatly annoyed, scarcely opened his lips to this gentleman, and afterwards told his host, in an aggrieved tone, that "he liked a joke as well as any man, but there was a time and a place for all things." No joking allusion to a character of his novel had, however, been designed or perpetrated: the fellow-guest was a Capt. Crawley, and held a commission in the Life Guards.

An unpleasant truth is often given expression with the hope that it may receive contradiction, and in this way conscience be put at ease.

"The friend not blind to faults To oft is counted as an enemy."

because this balm is not administered, even if judgment decides otherwise. A young mother expects a very different reply from the loving relative to whom she said: "I really believe my husband is jealous of the baby!" The woman, already awake to the great mistake of neglecting all else for her child, found scant consolation in the honest, serious response: "I am sure he has every reason to be, poor fellow!"

DAILY HINTS TO HOUSE-KEEPERS.

We rise by the things that are under our feet.

By what we have mastered of good and gain.

By the pride deposed and the passion slain.

And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet.

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

BREAKFAST—Peaches and Bananas, Beefsteak, Over-browned Potatoes, Graham Muffins, Syrup, Coffee.

DINNER—Bouillon, Roast Leg of Lamb, Green Peas, Potatoes, Cauliflower, Lettuce, Egg, Gravy, White and Graham Bread, Peach Ice Cream, Wafers.

LUNCH—Bread and Butter, Raspberry Jam, Fruit, Cakes, Tea.

Home is one of the dearest and dearest words in the language. It stands for an association of human beings the most sacred and momentous. The true home is built upon sacrifice, the surrender of each to the good of all.—Rev. George A. Gordon.

Make the daily meals a means of grace. A cheerful face with cheerful conversation is an excellent comfort.

A nautical fever seems to have broken out among us, now that the international yacht races are so close at hand. Since the trial races we have been thinking and talking nothing but sailor lingo, and it crops out in our clothes whenever we have the slightest excuse for allowing it to do so.

We go to the seashore or enjoy that greatest of blessings, a trip on some yacht, and Jack Tar would easily recognize us as his sisters by our garb. Materials for yachting suits are legion. Among them are pique, duck, serge, and

SWEET SIXTEEN. Marseilles, denim and flannel, but the greatest of these is denim. None are more chic than the suits made of it. The dark side of the material may be used for the costume, and the collar, cuffs and the forepart contrasted by turning out the "lighter side for them. Denim never loses its stiffness, but stands with a dignity all its own.

The boating skirts are rather short and full, sleeves not a whit smaller than those of our evening gowns, and collars, sailors in shape, opening in front to reveal a vest, which is probably of white pique. Skirts almost invariably have bands about the hem of braid or some contrasting material.

The young lady whose gowns we have copied is enjoying the first vacation after her graduation. She wears a yachting costume of blue linen, with two rows of white braid about the hem of the skirt. The feature of this gown is the large sailor collar. It is very long in front, and each side comes to a point well below the waist, where they are knotted together in true sailor fashion.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Busy Housewives Will Find These Suggestions Very Simple and Useful. Any woman doing her work may so systematize it that it will be the easiest possible thing imaginable for her. She need not follow any other person's methods, unless they are the very best for her own conditions.

A new finish for furniture is that of Epping oak, and is a green with a real forest hue in its brown depths. Chairs and high, straight-backed settees, intended chiefly for halls, though they are seen in other parts of the house, are furnished in this way.

You cannot make good tea with hard water, unless you soften it with a tiny pinch of bicarbonate of soda. Let the water be freshly drawn, and quickly boiled, then use at once. The tea will be ready to use after an infusion of about seven minutes.

To make a mustard plaster for a child take one teaspoonful of ground mustard and three of flour, with water enough to make a good stiff paste. Spread between two cloths, and use one cloth, placed to the use of flour. Mixed with the white of an egg it will raise a blister. Don't bathe your head and temples in cologne, and don't try to scent your hair that way, because the alcohol in it will turn your hair gray, and burn out the natural oil. Above all things don't keep trying all the new patent medicines that are advertised to make the hair grow on the back of your neck, even if they may do that, and they seldom do.

The system of washing-linen with petroleum said to be customary in Paris and Russia, has been introduced into a German military hospital. Fifteen grams of petroleum are added to fifteen liters of water containing soap and lye, and the linen is boiled in the mixture. The cleansing is much easier than by usual methods. The linen suffers less and assumes a whiter color.

Ribbons used to ornament various pieces of fancy work often need washing. Wash them in the same way as embroidered cloths and protect them from the iron with clean brown paper or cloth. Iron them before they are dry. Scarlet washes best among the colors for ribbons, and the satin finished ribbons will appear after laundering almost as fresh as new, but moire lose their unique finish.

What Keeps Women Young. A woman is happy just in proportion as she is content. The sun is the way of changing the spots upon which it shines. Especially is this true of our land, where one is up-to-day and down-to-morrow and vice versa. The wisest woman is she who trusts in a tomorrow, but never looks for it. To sit down and wish that this might be, that that would be different, does a woman no good. It does her harm in that it makes her dissatisfied with herself, unpleasant to her friends, and makes her old before her time. Happiness is not always increased in proportion to enlarged success. This may sound like an old saw, and I think it is, but there is a world of wisdom in many an old proverb just the same. Contentment is a wonderful thing to cultivate. There would be fewer prematurely old women in the world if it were given more of a trial and it became a more universal quality in womanhood.

Fashion's Enormities. The expansion of sleeves is becoming a crying evil, and a positive source of discomfort in crowded auditoriums and public conveyances. If the evil does not abate we may be compelled to revive the following ordinance in regard to them, adopted by the town of Dedham, Mass., in 1639: "And be it further enacted, that hereafter no person whatsoever shall make a garment for women or any other sex with sleeves more than half an ell wide in the widest part, and so proportionate for bigger or smaller persons. And for present reformation of immoderate great sleeves, and some other superfluities which may easily be redressed without much prejudice or spoil of garments, it is ordained, etc."

CLAIMS JAY GOULD'S ESTATE
Was Married to Gould When 15 Years of Age—A Startling Suit Threatened.
New York, Aug. 7.—The World to-day says that Mrs. John Angell, of Rouses Point, N. Y., claims to have been married at the age of 15 to the late Jay Gould, then aged 17, and alleges that the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Clayton, of Champlain, N. Y.

The plaintiff, Mrs. John Angell, declares herself to be the first and original and only legal wife of the late millionaire. Mrs. Angell has collected evidence to prove this surprising claim, and her case is in the hands of several well-known firms of New York lawyers.

Not only do Mrs. Angell's allegations, if established, illegitimize the present family of Jay Gould, but they upset the entire estate, and throw into inextricable tangle the vast millions of the late millionaire. Mr. Gould, if Mrs. Angell establishes her claim, every title, deed and conveyance made by Jay Gould is vitiated, according to the law of the State.

Never in any court in this country was made a claim against an estate of such far-reaching extent. Perhaps more interesting even than this is the claim of a daughter of this first wife. This young woman, who is now married, is living in a western state, and is a party to the claim against the Gould estate. She is represented by a separate law firm, one of whose members has recently been here in her interest.
