the London Street Railway Company has been sold out to the big and wealthy syndicate which has bought the street railway franchises of Toronto, Montreal, Cleveland and other cities, and operates the electric systems in those places.

The transaction is of very recent date, and the action of those who held the majority of the stock has somewhat dumbfounded the other shareholders, who were unaware of the novement, and feel alarmed lest their interests should be jeopardized. Representatives of the syndicate, unknown to most of those present, attended the meeting of the City Council on Monday evening last, and from the rear seats in the hall watched the proceedings with interest. It will be remembered that consideration of the London street railway proposition was then deferred at the request of the secretary of the company.

MAY VS. CITY OF LONDON.

This was a suit brought by George and Mary May, of London township, sgainst the City of London and Contractor Crawford Beckett, co-respondent. When Beckett was constructing the block pavement on Dundas street, during the summer, Mrs. May met with an accident, for which she claims $200. She and her sou were driving home about 8 o'clock one Saturday evening, and when between Rectory streets and Queen's Park the horse suddenly tumbled over a pile of loose earth, and the wagon tipping to one side Mrs. May was thrown out. For three months afterwards she was unable to do any work, and during a great portion of that time she was con-fined to her bed as a result of the injuries sustained by the accident. Her arm, knee and eye caused her considerable pain and expense for medical attendance. Mrs. May stated that the electric lights on the corners of Dundas street and Rectory and Chester streets were not lighted. Had they been she was sure she could have seen the pile of loose sand over which her horse stumbled. George May, a lad l4 years of age, was driving the horse. He said he could see the sidewalk, the curbing and the stones between the street railway tracks. He was high enough on top of the wagon to see the stones and sand, and could not say why he had not seen them. After five it 10 o'clock.

Charge of Seduction—The Plaintiff's Evidence—A Liquer Fine.

Florence Mary Godwin, aged 19, living at 467 Hamilton road, appeared at the Police Court this morning to prosecute her charge of seduction against Charles James Ross, a married man living at 351 Clarence street. The plaintiff stepped into the box and told her story. She said she became acquainted with Ross in July, 1891, at Mrs. Warwick's house, on Adelaide street. He claimed to be Mrs. Warwick's cousin. She met him again two weeks later on the street and he asked if he might call on her. She consented. He came on an average twice a week and frequently said he would marry her. In December, 1891, he spoke of marriage, but asked her not to mention it to he parents as he was not quite ready. He asked her if she loved him and she said "Yes." She became unduly intimate with him in January, 1892, and on a subsequent occasion. Defendant tall her it would make no difference, as nd on a subsequent occasion.
