STRATHROY.

[Advertiser Agent, J. D. Meekison.] Strathroy, June 4.-What promises to be a very pretty spot and a popular one among the residents of Strathroy is what is familiarly known as the flats, where, under the direction of some public-spirited business men, a great transformation is being effected. It is proposed to fit up the old grounds as a modern park, where a pleasant afternoon can be spent by those having leisure, a purpose for which it is ad-mirably adapted, shade being abundant beneath the spreading branches of stately trees growing in their native state on several portions of the park. A picturesque bridge now spans Bear Creek, which winds through a portion of the grounds, and a band stand has been erected, which will also serve admirably as a platform for public speakers on occasions when demonstrations are held, which is quite often. The natural beauty of the place will be enhanced by the erection of fountains in various places, and already the windmill is in place to raise water into a huge tank, from which the supply will be drawn. Lovers of baseball will have a splendid diamond provided, where the game can be enjoyed, for that portion of the ground has been sodded and leveled in a most perfect manner. The lawn bowlers and tennis players also have a spot on which a great deal of time has been spent, until now the ground is almost perfect, and genuine sport is in store for lovers of the game. It is the intention to have erected a grand stand, and in every cater to the wants of a live community in providing every comfort for the viewing of outdoor sports of various kinds, in which the youth of Strathroy and surroundings country delight. Of course, when everything is in shape the place at night will be well lighted electricity. Though the outlay will be large, those who have charge of the improvement can rest assured of the entire support of every taxpayer in providing a recreation ground of such beauty for the people. Strathroy is going ahead.

GRANTON. Granton, June 4.-Granton is again called upon to mourn the death of one of her oldest and most respected citizens in the person of the late Mr. Hugh Cameron, who died at his late residence on Main street, on Thursday May 30, at the age of 72 years. Mr Cameron came here from the city of London 37 years ago, and was among the first to commence business in Granton. Since then he has been a continuous resident and closely identifled with the interests of this village. He was noted for his uprightness and integrity. In politics he has always been a strong supporter of the Reform Government, and in religion a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. One son, Samuel, of Regina, N. W. T., and six daughters, Mrs. H. Ivor and Mrs. R. Henderson, of Toronto; Mrs. F. Clare, of Preston; Mrs. Wm. #### POND MILLS. Pond Mills, June 4.-Undoubtedly the best school concert on record was given in Pond Mills school on Thursday evening by the pupils and teacher, Mr. Bert Murray. The night was all that could be desired, and the many people who turned out and the order of the meeting showed the esteem with which Mr. Murray is held in this section. We have every reason to congratulate Mr. Murray on the part taken by his pupils, who showed the ability of their young but enthusiastic No sight could be more beautiful than to watch the band of juvenile patriots as they sang their patriotic songs and waved the emblems of Canada the free. The assistants at the concert were Chas. Percy, A.L.C.A., London, who was in his usual good form. Will Johnston kept the house in laughter. Penny Brothers are a band in themselves. Ella Hayes showed her control over her violin in some difficult selections. Mr. Freeand sang his comic songs in good voice. Miss Howe plays her violin with unusual sweetness and effect. Miss Flood is the possessor of a clear, rich voice and sings with great effect and expression. Miss Alma James, of St. Thomas, is a perfect little elocutionist. She won her audience with "Sandy's Romance" and "Lasca." After the concert Mr. Murray entertained his talent until the early dawn.

BUFFALO BILL ON BEAUTY.

How Women Can Get and Keep a Rose-Leaf Skin.

He Has One Himself—Live in the Open Air and Eat Little-Thinks Women Should Ride Astride.

When Col. William F. Cody, whose real name in Buffalo Bill, rides gallantly across the arena, even the small boys peeking through the windows can see that he is a fine figure of a man. But not they nor visit be little and But not they, nor yet the little and the big aristocrats in the front boxes, can properly appreciate the colonel's These minor beauties consist of a small and elegantly arched foot, a certain caressing way in which the colonel's hair curls about his buckskin collar, and finally a skin as soft as a baby's. Now the size of the colonel's shoes is a matter between himself and his shoemakers, and the tender wave in the colonel's hair, there is every reason to believe, is something he has neither begged nor borrowed, nor paid for at the barber's. It is a touch of nature that couldn't be rubbed out even f the colonel wanted to have it done.

But the baby skin of the old Indian fighter is different. For it is a curious act that whereas all the people in the Wild West show were once equipped with baby complexions, the colonel is the only man of them that still retains one of that sort. A fachionable woman would pawn her diamonds to have a skin like his. And yet the colonel is not set up by this pre-eminence. In fact he seemed rather upset rather than set up when feminine admirer asked him for his recipe for the care of the complexion. A soft blush mantled the colonel's cheek and he took a deep breath which made his powerful figure show up to better advantage than ever. Then with the modesty of the true hero and the true beauty alike he evidently suspected that he was being guyed.

"I haven't shaved today," he said apologetically, passing his hand over his cheek, where the blush above-mentioned had made itself delicately at

"Don't you do anything to keep yourself in good physical condition? Don't you have to fight fat? Do you never find yourself getting stooped? Above all, how do you manage that rose-leaf

"Why," said the colonel, "why-really-I've never been interviewed on anything of this sort. If," hopefully, "if you'd like to hear about the time we had four kings and a joker in the Dead-wood coach—" "Oh, of course, if it's a secret!"

What's a secret?" "What you do for your complexion." "I don't do anything. Such as it is, was born with it."

"Exactly. So was I born with one like it. The question is, how did you manage to hang on to it?"

"You want the story of my life?"
"In a nutshell. Better still, in a capule, to be administered to women wanting to reform their complexions.' "Well, it won't have to be a large capsule. About three grains of wisdom is all I can give them. First, be born with pure blood; second, live an out-ofdoor life; third, don't overeat. The first and Quartermaster J. H. My early life on the was solemnized on Wednesday morn- plains gave me the physique which carries me now through an amount of work which would break down most attired in white organdie, with satin I slept at night under the sky and lived by day in the saddle until my lungs had grown and deepened and strengthened, so that all the years since then have not robbed me of what I gained

"It's easy for me to eat little because I'm never hungry. When I used to go out on military expeditions in the old lays we were often put on half rations. When we were I could always give half of my half ration to somebody else. And it was the same with water. I could go for twelve or fifteen hours without even feeling thirsty. And I've never drank much water, though I beit is said to be good for the

"I sleep only about four hours a night, going to bed about midnight and lie awake about two hours going over my business affairs and planning for the work of the next day. sleep until 6 o'clock, when I get up. I have an orange, a little oatmeal, a bit of sirloin steak and a couple of boiled eggs for breakfast, and then I'm loaded for work. "Of course, I think the American women are the finest in the world, but they could learn a good deal from English women. Take the English woman's complexion, which is acknowl edged to be better than the American woman's. It comes from her out-ofdoor life. I've seen women of all nations, but next to the Americans I like the English best. They're more of my sort. They love horses, and I like anybody that does that. "My! but those English women can ride! And they are sensible enough to ride in the only way a woman should, and that is astride. You mark my words, ten years from now there won't be one side saddle in a thousand. What sort of way is that to ride a horse? Skewed around like this," hanging his legs over the arm of a chair. "I used to think that a woman in one of those long habits, riding in the old-fashioned way, was the prettiest sight in the world. I still think she is pretty fine, but she is nothing to a woman riding astride. When a woman has learned to ride that way she is far ahead of a man riding as a swallow's flight beats a duck's. It's beautiful to see her. "The English women are beginning to ride to hounds that way, and they will make it the fashion. They're good sports in every way; brave, strong, good comrades and fair opponents.

"You seem to waver in your allegiance to the American women." "Well, I am just a bit gone on the English women.

"How about the French?" "Oh, they're too much like a plumb firecracker. They go off all of a sudden, with a lot of fuss and flurry, and it's all over. Give me the English women. I wish our American girls would follow their example in some respects. If they did, they'd not take such an absorbing interest in what shall be done to save a complexion. The complexion would take care of itself."

THE AGENT'S TRICK

He Employed a Woman's Two Surnames to Good Advantage.

[From the New York Tribune.] This is a true story, which points out the advantage of possessing, or at least occasionally making use of, more than one surname. Last year Mrs. Smith, who lives in an apartment house uptown, needed an up-to-date sewing machine for a few weeks, and so hired one from a well-known company. Two or three weeks ago she received a call from a commission salesman of the firm. He reminded her of the fact that she had hired a machine last spring, and asked if she would not like one to use again this season for two or three weeks on trial. Mrs. Smith said that she had no intention of buying a sewing machine at pressent, but the agent, not at all deterred by this, seemed anxious to lease

"Well," said Mrs. Smith, finally, reflecting that she could use one for a little work that she had on hand, "I don't care; you may bring it if you like.

A few days later the machine arrived, in charge of one of the company's porters. 'Inis man, however, before carrying it upstairs, came in to inquire whether the right name had been given to him. "It says on my card," he explained, "that this is to be left with a family by the name of

Now, the card on the letter box of the Smiths' apartment reads: "Mr. Henry Jones Smith."

"Oh," said Mrs. Smith, "that is the middle name. "Yes," said the man, "so I noticed on the card. I suppose it's just the salesman's mistake, but I wanted to make sure it was right to leave the machine.'

But he seemed still to be turning the matter over in his mind, for, after placing the machine where it was desired to have it, and starting to go, he suddenly asked:

"Did you ever have a machine ours on trial before?" "No,", replied Mrs. Smith, "but hired one last year."

"Oh," said the porter, smiling, as if he had solved a mystery, "that's it, then! They do it sometimes. It wasn't any mistake on the agent's part to give a different name. Much puzzled, Mrs. Smith asked for an explanation. "Well, you see," said the porter, "it's against the rules to send out a ma-chine on trial to anybody who has ever hired one, the idea being, of course, that if you will pay for one there's no use in sending it to you free. But the agents want to leave as many as possible, to get all the chances they can of making sales, so they sometimes fix up schemes like this. Now, when it's time to return this machine, if anybody calls for it in the name of Jones, why, you'll understand it's all right. But I'll probably be the one who comes, and I'll remember. You see, it is reported at the office as having been left with people named Jones. Good day."

FRENCH DUELING PISTOLS

Shoot Sparrows.

[New Orleans Times-Democrat.]

'I'd like to know something about the caliber of their pistols," said a crack shot of this city, "before I indulge in any panegyric on this nerve of Count Boni de Castellane and M. de Rodays. The pistol is regarded as a barbarous weapon by the regulation Parisian duelists, and when it sisted upon they generally do all they can to mitigate the horror of the oc casion. I was shown several specimens of the standard dueling arm in one of the fashionable shooting galleries of Paris a few years ago, and my merry laughter seemed to pain the habitues who were present. They explained to me, with dignity, that a gentleman does not desire to mutilate or mangle his adversary on the field of honor, as they understood was the custom in a large slab of stone has to be desemi-civilized America, and that their tached a slit is opened behind it, and pistels were made specially to avoid any brutal disfigurement. I agreed cordially that they were well adapted to that end. They were six millimeters in caliber, which is nearly the same as our 22, and were loaded with special cartridges that contained about half the regular service charge. Unless it was by the biggest kind of a fluke I don't see how such a gun could make more than a flesh would. I am certain it would not break a bone at twentyfive paces. I was assured by the maitre d'armes at the gallery that the type of pistol I saw was the one used at all the famous duels of recent date, and I was then able to understand why those who were wounded were able to make such recoveries. Prior to that time I had supposed the stereotyped joke about the harmlessness of French dueling pistols was badly overdrawn but I doubt now whether it does the subject justice. It is a fact, by the way, that several Americans have bluffed themselves out of duels in Paris by insisting on Colt 45-caliber revolvers at short range. The hero of one memorable episode of that kind was a physician who has now the largest practice in the American colony. He was challenged by a well-known young Parisian, and, when waited on by a very stiff-necked colonel, who acted as go-between, exhibited a couple of frontier six-shooters, which he de clared must be the weapons. 'My principal is, unfortunately, not an artilleryman, monsieur, said the colonel, dryly, and that closed the incident." POLITENESS AS A FINE ART.

A Vienna correspondent writes that there is a law in Austria which makes it a very serious offense to insult a public official, or even to offend his dignity in any way. Public officials include all railway employes from traffic director to porter, policemen, tramway drivers and conductors and municipal street cleaners. Recently an electric tramcar ran into an omnibus and overturned it. One of the omnibus passengers, Frau Sidonie Lankh, wife of a well-known doctor in Vienna, was badly cut and received a severe shock to her nerves, which prostrated her for weeks. After the collision in her alarm and pain, she cried, referring to the driver of the electric car: "The wretched fellow! Why couldn't he stop sooner?" For this expression she was summoned and sentenced to a fine of £1 13s 8d "for insulting a public official."

THE PANIC IN

A Typical Scene in a Broker's Office on Blue

The office of one of the best-known stock-brokers in Wall street at the height of Tuesday's panic afforded more material for the dramatist than could be found elsewhere in New York. It was a typical office. Every man present had gone to that place actuated by what is possibly the strongest motive power known to humanity in this age-that is, greed. Greed had made them speculate, greed had made them vision to themselves all manner of delectable conditions-to-be; weeks and weeks, greed had made then neglect their own business and the remonstrances of their consciences and the whispers of their business honor.
"Steel, 24," said the senior partner, and then, sitting down on a lounge, he sobbed as though his heart would break -the man-sobs that rack the entire body. The junior partner, himself a man past middle age, looked at his partner vacantly, and then began to weep softly. The head clerk came in, looked on his chiefs, and said huskily:
"Try Mr. Blank; he'll help you. We may pull through." But the senior partner shook his head, and between his sobs said: "Twenty years in Wall street. And always perfectly honest!" The star customer of the firm strolled in. His own fate depended upon the solvency of the firm. He saw the three swollen-lidded weeping men, and began to rebuke them profanely for their cowardice, to blame them, in the mock-anger of an indignant friend, for giving up hope. But all the answer he received was negative shakes from the junior partner and a mute wring-ing of hands by the confidential clerk. And on the lounge in one corner of the room the senior partner of that firm, a men who was reckoned among the popular New York millionaires on the day previous, whose straits were due to no fault of his own, but to the utterly unexpected extent of the panic, heed less of the ticker, oblivious of partner and of the presence of others, repeated to himself from time to time: "Twenty years in Wall street. And always perfectly honest! Twenty years in Wall street. And always perfectly

And he was about to ose everything he had, everything that made life pleasant to those he loved. Indeed, he would lose more than he had; he would be in debt and his life journey was well-nigh done, and those friends who might help him were themselves in straits. There was a customer who owed them three-quarters of a million—a man who was a specula-tor pure and simple, a gambler to whom the stock exchange was merely a Monte Carlo, where the whirring tickers took the place of the roulette wheels. Well, the stock gambler borrowed a million on his wife's property. He staked it all to save his brokers. He did not look for bargain—in his wife's name—in other offices. He proved honest. His reward? The brokers did not fall that day, and the head of the firm, who had been twenty years A Southerner Says They Would Hardly Do to in Wall street, and always perfectly honest, laughed hysterically-laughed and laughed, as his partner hurried with the money to their bank, and thanked the gambler by saying, tween bursts of unnatural merriment: "You are a dead game sport, Bill; you are a dead game sport." And the house had weathered the storm. There were many other offices where the ticker tape was wet

The Best Physicians Recommend MALT BREAKFAST FOOD As a True Health Food.

Many of the common and cheaply prepared grain foods use the term "Health Food" on their labels; this is misleading, as a proper analysis would prove. The term "Health Food" is properly added to Malt Breakfast Food, and the ablest physicians recommend it as such. The purest health giving malt, combined with the choicest wheat, gives to the world a health food unequaled for producing flesh, bone and muscle. Grocers everywhere.

A Pain Remedy.

The True Relief.

For Internal and External Use. In using medicines to stop pain we should avoid such as inflict injury on the system. Opium, Morphine, Chloroform, Ether, Cocaine and Chloral stop pain by destroying the sense of perception, the patient losing the power of feeling. This is a most destructive practice; it masks the symptoms, shuts up, and, instead of removing treuble, breaks down the stomach, liver and bowels, and, if continued for any length of time, kills the nerves and produces local or general paralysis.

There is no necessity for using these uncertain agents when a positive remedy like RADWAY'S READY RELIEF will stop the most excruciating pain quicker, without entailing the least danger in either infant or adult.
